OFFICIAL REPORT OF GEN. GRANT.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Nov. 26.

The following has been received at the Headquarters of the United States Army, in this city:

CHATTANOOGA, Nov. 25—7:15 P. M.

To Maj.-Gen. Halleck, General-in-Chief:

Although the battle lasted from early dawn till dark this evening, I believe I am not premature in announcing a complete victory over Bragg.

Lookout Mountain Top—all the rifle pits in Chattanooga Valley and Missionary Ridge entire—have been carried, and are now held by us.

(Signed,) U. S. GRANT, Major-General.

OFFICIAL REPORT OF GEN. THOMAS.

CHATTANOOGA, Nov. 25—Midnight.

To Maj.-Gen. Halleck, General-in-Chief:

The operations of to-day have been more successful than yesterday, having carried Missionary Ridge from near Rossville to the railroad tunnel, with a comparatively small loss on our side, capturing about forty pieces of artillery, a large quantity of small arms, camp and garrison equipage, besides the arms in the hands of prisoners.

We captured two thousand prisoners, of whom two hundred were officers of all grades, from Colonels down.

We will pursue the enemy in the morning.

The conduct of the officers and troops was everything that could be expected.

Missionary Ridge was carried simultaneously at six different points.

(Signed,) GEO. H. THOMAS, Maj.-Gen.

REPORTS FROM CHATTANOOGA.

CHATTANOOGA, Thursday, Nov. 26.

Gen. BRAGG'S retreat from his position of last night is represented as a perfect rout.

Gen. SHERIDAN reached Chickamauga Station at 4 o'clock this morning, where he captured 500 prisoners, 4 guns and a number of pontoons.

The enemy attempted to burn the bridge behind him, and partially succeeded.

The enemy also burned the depot and stores at Chicamauga.

Gen. SHERMAN crossed the Chicamauga this forenoon.

Gen. HOOKER was reported at Ringgold at 5 o'clock this evening.

The desertions and captures from the rebel army are rapidly thinning it.

The number of cannon captured thus far is reported at 52, including the celebrated Loomis battery, which was lost by us at Chicamauga.

Gen. SHERMAN'S loss is much less than estimated, and will probably not exceed 500.

Nearly 6,000 prisoners have been reported.

The son of Gen. BRECKINRIDGE and Maj. WILSON, his Chief of Staff, were brought in among the prisoners.

Gen. BRECKINRIDGE himself narrowly escaped.

A strong column is in pursuit of the enemy, and it is not improbable another disastrous defeat will be forced on him.

REPORTS FROM LOUISVILLE.

LOUISVILLE, Thursday, Nov. 26.

The Journal's special dispatch from Chattanooga, 25th, says: Gen. BRECKINRIDGE'S son has just been brought in a prisoner.

Among our killed are Capt. BARNEY, Lieut. WISE and Col. PUTNAM.

Among our severely wounded are Capt. DANIEL O'CONNER and Capt. BROWER.

Among our wounded are Lieut.-Col. GILMORE, Capt. DAVIS, Adjt. TUCKER, Lieut.-Col. HEATH, Maj. JOHNSON and Adjt. BOND.

Our camp fires last night were blazing along the crest of the whole ridge, a distance of eight miles. BRAGG was expected to withdraw under cover of night. At dark BRAGG was in line of battle to cover the Knoxville Railroad, but it is believed he will not hazard another battle.

Our army is aglow with enthusiasm and eager to pursue.

Prisoners report the rebel army terribly demoralized, and incapable of offering serious resistance; and also that BRAGG will fall back to Atlanta.

Gen. BRANNAN occupies Tunnel Hill, which completes our line along the whole length of Missionary Ridge.

REPORTS FROM WASHINGTON.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Nov. 26.

The reports from Chattanooga received at the War Department represent that three thousand prisoners were captured from the rebels yesterday, with fifty-two cannon, five thousand stand of small arms and ten flags.

The rebel forces are utterly routed to-day, and in full retreat toward Dalton, Ga. They are burning the bridges after them to retard pursuit. They are also burning their depots and stores, and abandoning or destroying everything that will embarrass their flight.

GEN. BURNSIDE'S ARMY.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Nov. 26.

Official information from Gen. BURNSIDE down to the 23d, induces the belief that he is safe. He will be supplied and reinforced.

GEN. BUTLER'S DEPARTMENT.

Successful Expedition to Eastern Virginia—Capture of the Rebel "Marine Brigade"—Design of the Organization—The Russian Fleet to Winter at Old Point—Statement of a Refugee—A School of Rebels—The One Hundred and Forty-eighth New-York.

NORFOLK, Tuesday, Nov. 24, 1863.

SUCCESSFUL EXPEDITION TO EASTERN VIRGINIA.

A combined expedition, consisting of the navy gunboat Morse, Capt. BABCOCK, and 450 men from the One Hundred and Forty-eighth New-York, under command of Col. GUION, left Yorktown on Monday, of last week, in search of a party of the rebel "Marine Brigade," reported to be on their way from Richmond to Mob Jack Bay, to commit depredations on our commerce. The Morse landed the regiment the same evening at the headwaters of East River, which at once marched across the country to Matthew's Court-house, where information was obtained that the "Marines" had left the place but a few hours previously. Passing the night there, early the next morning the march was continued northward as far as Shuffletown, on the Piancatank River. No trace of the rebels being discovered, the regiment turned about, and scoured the country down to the mouth of the Piancatank, encamping that night at Cricket Hill.

The next morning, crossing in small boats to Gwynne's Island, the men were deployed across it, and the cover beaten as they advanced. About noon, near the lower end of the island, their labor was rewarded by the discovery of the entire party for which they were in search, consisting of an Acting Master in the rebel navy, named WEBB, and fifteen men. The marines were hidden in the reeds and bushes of a swamp, and offered little resistance. Each man was armed with a carbine, cutlass, and pistol of English manufacture. They had with them a 12-pounder breach-loading brass howitzer, which, however, they had previously concealed in the woods. A sloop, with which they intended to commit depredations on passing vessels, was discovered up a creek and burned. They were expecting to capture a large vessel, and eventually to attack one of the mail boats plying between Fortress Monroe and Baltimore, from which city WEBB and nearly all his gang of pirates hailed. In the possession of WEBB was found his commission as Master in the rebel navy, together with a letter of instructions from Secretary MALLORY, ordering him to proceed to the rivers and creeks of Eastern Virginia, organize his party, and annoy our commerce as extensively as possible. To what proportions this incipient marine brigade might have been recruited we can, fortunately, only conjecture. At any rate, the expedition was timely, and Secretary MALLORY'S amiable designs have been completely frustrated.

The One Hundred and Forty-eighth returned to Yorktown on Thursday with their prisoners, who were sent to Fort Norfolk. Capt. BABCOCK, commander of the Morse, displayed extraordinary zeal in the discharge of his duties. The streams emptying into East River were patrolled night and day by his boats, the vessel was held in readiness to assist the land force in case they were attacked by superior numbers, and in every possible way, with sleepless vigilance, this model naval officer contributed his best efforts to the success of the expedition.

LATE ARKANSAS NEWS.

CAIRO, Ill., Thursday, Nov. 26.

Late accounts from the Arkansas River represent that the country is subject to frequent incursions of rebel conscripting squads, and that the citizens have been compelled to band together for mutual protection. This state of affairs renders the efforts of the planters to gather their crops ineffectual, and the amount of cotton gathered will be small in comparison with the amount grown.

The rebel force of Gen. PRICE is represented to be small, with no prospect of any movement on his part.

The Memphis Bulletin, in noticing arrivals there, says:

"It is believed that in a few days the restrictions now preventing cotton from coming in from the country will be removed. The stock here is rapidly decreasing. About 1,000 bales reached here yesterday by boats. The amount of business is small, and the quality of the cotton unchanged. Two hundred and eighty-seven hogsheads of sugar and 120 barrels of molasses have also arrived."

Meeting of the United States Christian Commission.

PHILADELPHIA, Thursday, Nov. 26.

An immense meeting was held here this evening by the United States Christian Commission, on behalf of the Union prisoners in Richmond. Bishop POTTER, of Pennsylvania, presided.

The building was filled to overflowing, many hundreds being unable to gain admittance.

Addresses were delivered by Bishop POTTER, Gov. BROUGH, of Ohio; Maj. BOLES, from the Libby Prison; GEORGE H. STUART, President of the Christian Commission, and others.

The collection amounted to over $10,000, and it is expected will reach $15,000.

From San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Wednesday, Nov. 25.

Increasing trade with the Mexican ports has induced the placing on of an extra on that line. These steamers carry passengers and freight to the lower coast and return loaded with ores from Mexico and the various shipping places along the Colorado River.

Business will be generally suspended over Thanksgivins Day.

About $130,000 have been subscribed in this city to the National Sanitary Fund recently.

The Brig Rio Grande Ashore.

ST. CATHARINE'S, Thursday, Nov. 26.

The brig Rio Grande, with a cargo of wheat and flour, is ashore at Port Colborne. She is full of water, and the prospects of saving her are poor.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Nov. 26.

THE SPEAKERSHIP OF THE HOUSE.

Over seventy Republican members have tendered to SCHUYLER COLFAX their votes to make him Speaker of the House; he solicits no suffrages. This offer of support is an irrepressible compliment to one of the most patriotic, experienced, practical, good tempered and modest men who have grown up in the House of Representatives.

A NATIONAL MISCHIEF.

The bronze ornamentation of the rejected fractional currency has been foisted upon the National Bank Note Printing Company, under a patent right that threatens to be nationally mischievous. It has to be impressed upon the paper dry. To take the impression of the bank note plate, the paper has to be dampened. In drying, it shrinks and twists, and utterly refuses to register. The first National Bank of Washington has refused to receive its notes thus printed. It has also protested against the currency thus artistically disfigured, as wholly unprotected from counterfeiting. The bronze can be removed by chemicals and replaced by a press.

IMPORTANCE OF THE OCCUPATION OF BROWNSVILLE.

The Foreign diplomatists here consider the occupation of Brownsville by BANKS as one of the most important successes of the war, and calculated to lead to most important consequences in our foreign as well as domestic relations. It is considered as certain to bring the new French pretensions on this continent to a head.

A HUMBUG EXPLODED.

Yesterday there was a moderate explosion of humbug in Secretary CHASE'S department. The alteration of a large quantity of the new fractional currency from 10 cents to 50 cents was suddenly discovered. It was effected by splitting the paper on which the two denominations are printed, and pasting the tens on the back of the fifties. A large amount of it was presented for redemption. It was, of course, peremptorily refused.

SUPPLIES FOR OUR PRISONERS.

Gen. MEREDITH arrived here to-day from Fortress Monroe, for further instructions from the War Department in regard to the forwarding of provisions and clothing to our prisoners at Richmond. He declares that he is satisfied that our prisoners do not receive articles sent them, although 48,000 rations were forwarded to Richmond a few days ago. Released prisoners state that none had yet been distributed among them by the rebel authorities, and that they had not received any meat for four days. Nine thousand outfits of clothing have also been sent, but no evidence of their distribution has been received at Fortress Monroe. Gen. MEREDITH has 72,000 rations ready to forward, but declines to ship them until advised of the safe arrival and distribution of those previously sent.

REDEMPTION OF CERTIFICATES.

The daily redemption of certificates at the Treasury amounts to nearly one million. The gross amount already redeemed is upward of twenty-five millions.

COTTON AT ATLANTA.

The rebels, as well as the rebel Government, some time back sent their cotton from the seaboard to Atlanta for safety, about two million bales altogether. It will be difficult for this cotton, or any considerable portion of it, to be removed before Gen. GRANT puts his hands on it. His movements in that direction will be rapid.

GOOD FINANCIERING.

Over two millions of gold have accumulated in the Sub-Treasury in San Francisco for customs. This gold has been ordered to be shipped to Europe. The Government will draw bills against it, and dispose of these in New-York.

DISPATCHES TO THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

WASHINGTON, Thursday, Nov. 26.

OUR PRISONERS AT RICHMOND—ARRIVAL OF RELEASED SURGEONS.

The ninety-five Surgeons recently released from the Libby Prison, captured at various times, and in different departments of the army, arrived here today. They embarked at Richmond, but were ordered below decks until after they had passed the rebel works at Fort Darling. They had no opportunity of learning the number of troops in that city. Clothing and provisions which have reached there have been distributed, affording great relief and cheering the suffering prisoners. The supplies, however, are not equal to the demand.

One of the Surgeons says their own condition was much alleviated by the permission to purchase necessaries outside of their prisons. They generally appear to be in good physical condition, though their wardrobes need replenishing.

While on their way hither they prepared a statement of the condition of the prisoners in the several places of confinement, and of the description of the fare and other points of interest on this subject, for presentation to the War Department.

One of our officers recently asked Commissioner OULD whether he would agree to a partial exchange of prisoners, and whether if we sent him, say five thousand rebels now in our hands, he would release an equal number of our own. He gave a negative response.

THANKSGIVING AT WASHINGTON.

Thanksgiving Day was generally observed in this city, the churches being better attended than on any previous occasion. The weather has been fine. The cheering news from Chattanooga, in the official form, was in the morning circulated throughout the city and caused general rejoicing.

THE APPROPRIATION ESTIMATES.

The estimates for appropriations, as lately published, are in many respects incorrect. The publication was not authorized by the Treasury Department. Even the present official estimates cannot be regarded as conclusive, because material obligations may by made before they are laid before Congress.

Thanksgiving Day in Boston.

CELEBRATION OF GEN. GRANT'S GREAT VICTORY.

BOSTON, Thursday, Nov. 26.

The glorious news received from the Southwest of the splendid victory of Gen. GRANT over the rebels, infused great spirit and interest to-day in the observance of our National and State Thanksgiving.

The event was specially and appropriately alluded to in the churches; congratulations were exchanged in the streets by the people; flags and banners were flung to the breeze—in fact, everywhere the day was celebrated as one of joy and gladness and thanksgiving.

The weather has been splendid.

Thanksgiving Day in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Thursday, Nov. 26.

Thanksgiving day was observed with unusual spirit, in consequence of the exhilarating news from Chattanooga, which was issued in extra Bulletin and announced in some pulpits. Union League House was illuminated. General display of bunting throughout the city. Theatres all crowded to excess tonight.

The Arabia Inward Bound.

HALIFAX, Thursday, Nov. 26.

The steamship Arabia did not sail for Boston until 7:30 A. M. to-day. She will be due there tomorrow (Friday) afternoon.

LATE SOUTHERN NEWS.

REBEL REPORTS FROM EAST TENNESSEE

Discovery of a Plot to Liberate Our Prisoners.

Rebel Hopes and Fears Before the Late Battle.

We have full files of Richmond papers from the 17th to the 24th, inclusive, from which we take the following interesting intelligence:

IMPORTANT FROM TENNESSEE.

GEN. LONGSTREET AT KNOXVILLE—BURNSIDE RETREATING—HIS ARMY DEMORALIZED—TWENTY-TWO HUNDRED YANKEES CAPTURED, ETC.

ATLANTA, Friday, Nov. 20.

Advices from the front represent that nothing more than the usual shelling has occurred since last report.

The Confederacy states that great destitution prevails at Chattanooga.

A special to the Intelligencer says considerable skirmishing has taken place at Nickajack Pass. The enemy have been driven back at that point.

The Appeal learns from Col. CHESTER that Gen. LONGSTREET had captured Knoxville, routing the enemy and taking 1,200 or 1,500 prisoners. One hundred and forty prisoners arrived on the same train with Col. CHESTER.

Gen. WHEELER is reported in the enemy's rear. Gen. LONGSTREET is pressing their front.

SECOND DISPATCH.

ATLANTA, Friday, Nov. 20.

Gen. WHARTON has returned from Richmond, promoted to the rank of Major General.

Gen. CHEATHAM has returned to the front. Gen. BUCKNER will go to the front in a few days.

Two hundred and thirty prisoners came down this evening. Many more are on the way down.

THIRD DISPATCH.

ATLANTA, Friday, Nov. 20.

An officer who left Loudon on the 18th instant reports that Gen. LONGSTREET captured sixteen hundred Yankees, and Gen. WHEELER six hundred, on that day (18th.)

Gen LONGSTREET was one mile and a half from Knoxville, intrenching.

In their retreat from Loudon, the Yankee army, about 5,000 strong, (?) were greatly demoralized. They left about 100 wagons, loaded with commissary and ordnance stores, in the road.

ROBINSON'S brigade left Loudon yesterday to repair the pontoons left by the Yankees on the Little Tennessee, leading into Blount county.

Persons liberated at Chattanooga report great suffering and want of food and fuel at that place.

One hundred and thirty-six Yankees, forming Gen. BURNSIDE'S rear guard, reached Dalton last night. They say that Knoxville is another Harper's Ferry trap, and BURNSIDE must evacuate.

FOURTH DISPATCH.

ATLANTA, Nov. 21—10:40 A. M.

The Chickamauga train, due at 4 o'clock A. M., is just in with upward of 100 Yankees from BURNSIDE'S rear.

Officers from the front last evening report nothing more than the usual firing. There are indications of a movement of more than usual importance being now expected.

FROM CHATTANOOGA.

ATLANTA, Saturday, Thursday, Nov. 19.

Advices from the front report that Gen. LONGSTREET was on Monday within ten miles of Knoxville, and advancing. A number of his wounded were reaching our lines.

A conflict between pickets for the possession of a wood-pile half way between Chattanooga and our lines, came very near bringing on a general engagement.

The Marietta Confederate says LONGSTREET certainly holds Knoxville.

FROM EAST TENNESSEE.

ABINGDON, Va., Monday, Nov. 23.

Various rumors of the occupation of Knoxville by our forces are coming in, but nothing official. Two thousand Yankees are reported to have passed Rogersville, and five regiments through Jacksboro', en route for Kentucky. Our forces are very active in front.

From the Richmond Examiner, Nov. 23.

All the news we have from Tennessee is contained in the telegrams to be found in another column; but there is a rumor that Longstreet has been stopped short in his high career by the failure of expected coöperation from our forces in East Tennessee.

From the Richmond Enquirer, Nov. 23.

The encouraging news sent us by Gen. BRAGG, by way of Dalton, seems to receive corroboration from intelligence received on Saturday in Lynchburgh, coming from East Tennessee by the upper end of the valley, by way of Abingdon. The Lynchburgh Republican, of Saturday, says:

"From information derived last night by the Western train, we think it beyond a doubt that our forces occupy Knoxville. It is reported that our Quartermasters and Commissaries who were run out from that place, are ordered to report there again. If our forces hold Knoxville, BURNSIDE will have to fall back upon Cumberland Gap, which place forms an obtuse angle with Greenville and Knoxville, it being the apex of the longest leg of the angle. From Greenville our forces can reach the Gap before the enemy, and the probability is that he will thus be cut off from escape."

AFFAIRS ON THE RAPIDAN.

ORANGE COURT-HOUSE, Monday, Nov. 23.

All quiet in front. President DAVIS arrived here on Saturday and is staying with Gen. LEE. He will probably review the army before he leaves. Nothing from the enemy.

FROM NORTHERN VIRGINIA.

All is, and to all appearances likely to remain, quiet on the Rapidan. The observations of recent scouts lead to the opinion that the bulk of MEADE'S army has not yet crossed the Rappahannock, but is lying upon the north bank of that stream, and that the country lying between the Rappahanock and the Rapidan is occupied only by his cavalry and a few brigades on picket. This confirms the opinion previously expressed in these columns, that the prospect of a renewal of active hostilities on the part of MEADE was extremely remote.

FROM CHARLESTON.

DEMONSTRATION AGAINST FORT SUMTER.

Official Dispatch.

CHARLESTON, Friday, Nov. 20.

To Gen. S. S. Cooper, Adj't-Gen:

The enemy made a demonstration, in six launches, against Fort Sumter this morning at 3 o'clock, but were repulsed in a few minutes by the garrison, the batteries, and one gunboat. The enemy's loss is unknown; ours none.

During the day the bombardment of Sumter was renewed with great vigor, and ten shells were thrown into the city, with but little damage and no casualties.

(Signed,) G. T. BEAUREGARD.

Press Dispatch,

CHARLESTON, Friday, Nov. 20.

Between 2 and 3 o'clock, this morning, the enemy, in several barges, approached Sumter, and upon being hailed from the fort, answered with oaths. They discharged several volleys of musketry, which were replied to by the garrison. The engagement lasted from 15 to 20 minutes, when the barges withdrew. Moultrie, Bee and Johnston also opened on the barges. It is not known what damage was done to the Yankees. Maj. ELLIOTT says that it was a feigned assault.

Gregg and Cummings' Point opened a very heavy fire on Sumter this morning. Two or three more shells were thrown into the city to-night. No person injured.

GEORGIA LEGISLATURE.

MILLEDGEVILLE, Thursday, Nov. 19.

The House has unanimously concurred in the resolution of the Senate reënacting the resolution in reference to the secession of Georgia, pledging anew the resources of the State in vindication of the position then assumed, and declaring the determination not to tire of the war until independence is achieved. The House also unanimously concurred in the Senate resolutions indorsing the patriotism and wisdom of President DAVIS, in the discharge of the arduous duties devolving upon him.

FROM MISSISSIPPI.

INAUGURATION OF GOVERNOR AND ELECTION OF SENATOR.

COLUMBUS, Miss., Tuesday, Nov. 17.

Gen. CHAS. CLARK, recently elected Governor of this State, was inaugurated yesterday with great pomp. In his inaugural address he urges the vigorous prosecution of measures for the defence of the State, and says that sooner than submit to the foe, should the army become exhausted, the women, children, and old men will, like the remnant of Pascagoula, join hands and march into the sea. He intends to make good use of the militia, by proper organization, and makes a strong appeal to the people to return absentees to the army.

Hon. J. W. C WATSON, of Marshall County, was elected Confederate Senator to-day, in place of Hon. JAMES PHELAN.

THE FEDERAL PRISONERS IN RICHMOND.

THE EXCHANGE QUESTION.

From the Richmond Enquirer, Nov. 23.

The exchange will probably be renewed. It turns out that MEREDITH, supposed to be Yankee Commissioner for Exchange, was not the Commissioner, but an agent. The real Commissioner is Gen. HITCHCOCK. The correspondence of Judge OULD and MEREDITH has terminated by an offensive and scurrilous letter written by the latter, which Judge OULD very properly returned. A new correspondence has commenced with HITCHCOCK.

It would seem that the Yankee plot to keep our prisoners from the field, and leave theirs in our hands, to be treated as we please, does not satisfy the people of the North. The very falsehoods so freely promulgated about barbarities and outrages inflicted on the Yankee prisoners at Richmond have defeated their own object. Instead of inspiring a burning passion for a resistless crusade to sweep from the face of the earth that den of demons, Richmond, to liberate the prisoners by force of arms, and deliver the city to their mercies, the effect has been to create a pressure on the Government to rescue them by the reasonable process of exchange.

From the Richmond Enquirer, Nov. 18.

Until further orders, no more Yankees are to be sent to Danville for Winter quarters. There have been in all, twenty-one hundred sent thither. There remain in Richmond eleven thousand four hundred.

CHARACTERISTIC CHARITY.

The Federal Government has been sending clothes and rations through to its unfortunate victims on Belle Isle and the Libby Prison, and great to-do has been made over the matter, much to the credit of the Yankee character for charity. Unfortunately for the poetry of the thing, the clothing and rations thus sent through are placed to the debit of the recipients, their regular pay is commensurately docked, and the profits go into the pockets of fat contractors. Old ABE pockets the "moral capital."

A BIG PLOT DISCOVERED.

From the Richmond Examiner, Nov. 23.

War is always fruitful of plots. The Yankees have discovered one in Canada, and our vigilant authorities think they have discovered one here in Richmond, which will prove an offset to the "mare's nest" among the lakes. In both instances the plotters had the same object in view—the release of prisoners—and both were unsuccessful—nipped in the budding.

The Yankee counter-plot to release the prisoners held in Richmond, and facilitate their escape in the indiscriminate slaughter of guards and populace, was brought prematurely to light through intercepted correspondence, and its machinations involved the prisoners at all the prisons, at the Libby and its tributaries on Belle Isle, and at Castle Thunder. On a night prearranged they were to rise en masse at the tolling of the midnight hour, overpower the comparatively few sentinels, and possessing all the arms within their reach, move at a "double-quick" in the direction of Williamsburgh and Yorktown, before reaching which they were to be met and succored by a large cavalry force of the enemy, also in the secrets of the plot, and who, on the same eventful night, were to make a rapid raid in the direction of Richmond and meet their friends half way. The besom of destruction was to mark the track of their triumphal march back from bondage. Richmond and the prisons were to blaze at their backs, and the flaming homesteads that dot the Williamsburgh road were to form their girdle—"a pillar of fire by night, a cloud by day."

Thus journeying, like the fleeing Israelites led by Moses out from Egypt and the bondage of Pharaoh, the Yankees were to reach the promised land before and spoil their enemies behind. NEAL DOW, it is said, was the chosen Moses of the excursion, and that he was seeking to hasten the distribution of Yankee clothing and rations to the prisoners, in order that they might start out well shod and clothed, and with full bellies and haversacks for the journey.

What a pity that such a lively programme should come to naught, and all through an intercepted letter! We are informed that, as soon as the existence of such a plot was made apparent to the authorities, they were fully alive to the exigencies of the hour, and equal to his emergencies. The guards around the prisons and on Belle Isle were immediately doubled, and the citizen militia, by order of the Governor, nightly paraded, and made a show of exceeding strength in the vicinity of the prisons. Additional pieces of cannon were planted on the heights overlooking Belle Isle, and the fullest preparations made to blow the Yankees out of existence upon the first symptom of revolt. The plot withered under these extraneous influences, the Yankees looked contented in their prison quarters, and SPEARS' cavalry did not dash out of Williamsburgh. The "tempest" was "in a teapot," and "all's well that ends well."

The plot to liberate the prisoners, overpower or murder the guards, and burn as much as possible of Richmond, which plot was ventilated in these columns on Monday, it seems was first disclosed to the authorities through one of the Yankee prisoners; and an investigation immediately instituted, disclosed the startling fact that such a plan was really on foot, and that its timely discovery alone prevented the attempt being made.

The first revelations were made about the 27th of October, and again about the 31st, additional and more positive evidence was brought to light through various combinations early in November. Soon after the plot was deemed serious enough to squash before it came to a heading, and it was accomplished in such a manner as to indicate to the ten or twelve thousand conspirators that their game was in our hands and that the authorities were "masters of the situation."

It is very positively asserted that the Yankee commander at Fortress Monroe was in the secrets of the conspirators, who were to receive very material aid from men who are seen (but not known) upon the streets of Richmond every day. Fortunately for the Confederacy, the disclosures that have followed the denouement have fixed the argus eyes of the Government upon such, and true as daylight follows darkness, they will one day be brought to stand in an ignominious light before the public, if not to hang in a state of suspension between heaven and earth at Camp Lee.

Gen. FOSTER, commanding the Department of North Carolina and East Virginia, was, undoubtedly, aware of the existence of such a plot, and gave it aid and countenance, promising to have a force of cavalry ready to protect the rear of the released prisoners, and to supply them with arms to enable them to cut their way to Fortress Monroe.

The plot, it has been further learned, included the destruction of the arsenals, Government works, the important bridges across the James, and the gunboats at the Navy-yard at Rocketts. We will not intimate that this destructive programme could have been carried out; but would rather congratulate the citizens of Richmond on their delivery from the barest possibility of such frightful scenes as must have ensued had the plot ripened into open revolt.

Few, who slept soundly in their homes at night, were aware, or even dreamed of the volcanic demon that feigned slumber in their midst, only waiting for the signal to burst the cords of military restraint and riot in flame and blood.

Thanks to a providential interposition, the authorities forewarned are forearmed, and the day or night when such a revolt could have been successful is past.

MISCELLANEOUS ITEMS.

—A flag-of-truce steamer came up to City Point on Saturday, with over one hundred tons of freight on board, consigned to the prison authorities for distribution among the Yankee prisoners. When the steamer left Fortress Monroe, Capt. MULFORD was waiting there, with the steamer New-York, for the arrival of the Confederate surgeons, who were hourly expected from the North. The New-York was expected to reach City Point last evening or early this morning, with the surgeons on board.

—Lieut. GROGAN, of Gen. TRIMBLE'S Staff, has just arrived in Richmond, having succeeded in effecting his escape from Fort Johnson, in Lake Erie. The mode of his escape was very adventurous and perilous, but is not proper to be made known. The Lieutenant passed through Maryland, and expresses himself very grateful for the aid and comforts so freely afforded him, as usual, by the good Southerners of that State.

—We learn that sixty-three of the Yankee prisoners recently sent to Danville effected their escape from prison at that place a few nights ago. Measures were immediately taken for their arrest, and ere this the most of them are doubtless safely fixed in their old quarters.

—The Confederate captive Surgeons, long expected from the North, arrived yesterday afternoon at City Point—127 in number. The steamer brought, besides, nine tons of freight, consisting of clothing and other things for Federal prisoners.

—From fifteen hundred to two thousand bushels of salt are manufactured per day, at St. Mark's, Florida, and its vicinity. It is selling at ten to fifteen dollars a bushel, according to convenience for transportation.

THANKSGIVING

GRATITUDE AND JOY

Discourses of Right Rev. Bishop Potter, Rev. Dr. Bellows, Rev. Dr. Potts, Rev Dr. Chapin, Rev. J. P. Thompson, Rev. Henry Ward Beecher, Rev. Dr. Tyng, and Others.

WHAT WAS DONE AT THE INSTITUTIONS.

It is doubtful whether any day of Thanksgiving has been so generally, so purposely observed as yesterday. It broke upon us bright, clear and beautiful, and it really did seem as though Heaven designed participation with the prevailing happiness. At an unusually early hour all business was suspended, and long before the appointed time the several churches were filled to overflowing by those anxious to hear the words of religion and of loyalty. Yesterday they were made, as will be seen by the reports of the sermons we publish, almost synonymous terms. There appeared to be a general disposition to make the day one of thanksgivings, one of reverential enjoyment.

There was much good, too, done yesterday. All the charitable and benevolent institutions were supplied from kindly quarters with enough wherewith to feed those under their charge, and many with enough to clothe. Charity seems to have walked abroad; and, oh! did those who are able to secure it know at how little cost how much of joy could be purchased, we are sure they would buy it by the wagon-load, and go through the highways and the byways, and throw it broadcast for those who so seldom see it to secure. Many a heart beat loudly yesterday, to the music of joy and gratitude, in haunts where naught but silence and sorrow had prevailed. Many a sad and desolate home was invaded by the kindly, and help brought to the sick, and words and acts of comfort to the distressed and sorrowing. Much good was done yesterday—much more than past years have record of—and may it be the initiative of what makes thrice blessed and thrice happy those who administer it.

Everybody wore a holiday face. In the afternoon all the places of amusement were crowded to overflowing, and in the evening an outsider was the one who came half an hour before the time. There was no room in any place for such a laggard.

Space prevents our enumeration of all the specialties of the day. The war news so opportunely arriving, gave renewed zest to the thankfulness and enjoyment, and it was considered a glorious omen, that when a nation was in prayer its gratitude and supplications were illumined by the blaze of victory in the West.

Discourse of Bishop Potter.

Right Rev. Bishop POTTER delivered a discourse at St. Luke's Church yesterday:

TEXT: "Nevertheless, he left not himself without witness in that he did good and gave us rain from heaven and fruitful seasons, filling our hearts with food and gladness."—Acts, xiv, 17.

If the book of Revelations were wanting to us, the ever-present book of nature would reveal to us the presence of God and keep us mindful of what he has ever done for us. God was everywhere, for only upon the earth but throughout the whole universe. It would be a contradiction to suppose him absent from any one point, that any thing could be opened through him. The whole of life is ever going on, and we might be sure the darkness was ever present. For all the blessing with which he crowns us on this day there was occasion and room for thanksgiving. Our preservation was as much the effect of the special providence of God as if we had been in the thickest of the fight. As for our dear country, might they not say that, wounded and bruised as she had been, great as had been her trials, her sorrows, abundant cause for thankfulness was found to warrant the calling of a national thanksgiving? Dangers which seemed imminent had been mercifully averted; strongholds of treason, apparently sufficiently strong to defy the utmost efforts of the Government, had been wrested from the hands which held them, and made the bulwarks of law and peace. Hostile demonstrations of foreign Powers, sure to signalize our day of weakness, had been changed to very different manifestations as the shadow of our returning greatness came slowly moving on before the nation. And might they not add to these reasons for a national thanksgiving, that the institution which incited this monstrous civil war, the institution which from the first rung Independence had been our great national blot, and our great national disgrace, had been within the year put under the ban by the sovereign authority, and that it seemed by many tokens to be tottering to its fall? In the disasters which cast a cloud over our first great efforts to subdue the rebellion, and restore order—in these disasters there seemed to have been something very much resembling a merciful Providence. Had these first efforts been successful, had the rebellion been entirely subdued in the first six months, it was probable that the Union would have been restored with Slavery untouched; and not only so, but possessed of new guarantees for its future security; and the voice which to-day in that sacred place denounced it as the foulest stain on our history, as the miserable cause of all our troubles, would have been held silent by the restraint of the Constitution, and we should have returned to our old condition as a nation divided against itself, destined to be plagued by internal strife, to be weakened by an internal plague-spot, having within us a demon which never could be cast out; and therefore it was, perhaps, that in the outset of the struggle we met with defeat and disaster; therefore, perhaps, it was that the horrors of civil war were lengthened out, that our courage and virtue might be put to the proof, and that we might have time to get our eyes open to the nature of the power that was striking at us, and be forced to do what we were too slow to do for the deliverance of our country. We were to pay dearly for the coveted boon of universal freedom and vindicated National blessings; and he believed that we should secure them, and that future ages would pay the highest honor to our statesmen who stood firm, and our martyred patriots who gave their best blood for their country. And he believed that future ages would greatly marvel how any one could have latitated in support of a Government so engaged and so opposed; and they would wonder how any could have cast their sympathies and their moral support on the side of a power that was seeking to divide and dishonor their country and build up and extend the influence of human slavery. He knew he spoke in an unwonted tone. Their pastor was not responsible for a sentiment he uttered. He [the speaker] was a minister of peace, and he had long held his peace. He had had no participation in any of the causes at the North which were supposed by some to have hastened the war. He wished to see the Church as little involved in the strife as possible; he still desired to see her ministry supremely devoted to Christ and him crucified. Their sphere of duty was among them that mourn—among the destitute, among the hungry and thirsting after righteousness. But there were times when they had a duty to discharge to the country, and he thought the time had come when, if not on ordinary occasions, yet on such a day it became a chief pastorate of the Church of God in this country to speak out, to speak for God, for humanity, and for country. Civil war was deplorable, it was a great and some evil; but they were responsible for it who forced it upon the country by rebelling against a Government which did not harm them, which did nothing more than set limits to the extension of human servitude. Besides, they had no choice. If civil war waxed, there were things that were worse. Truckling to the slave oligarchy was worse; loss of national virtue and spirit was worse; consenting to division and dismemberment, and so exposing ourselves to foreign insult and aggression and endless internal feuds, was worse; throwing the reins upon the neck of the Slave Power, freeing it from the restraint of our Government, and so turning it loose in the world to enlarge its sway and aggravate the errors of its system—this was worse. And if we wished peace for the next fifty years, either at home or abroad, we must restore the Union—we must uphold and establish upon a firm basis the sovereignty of the National Government—and, however reluctantly forced to believe it, remove the element which had been disturbing our repose. If we are struggling in the cause of right and humanity, there was a Providence that would guide and sustain us. Should there yet be days of darkness, let us not despair of the Republic. It was scarcely to be expected that so mighty an element, and one so incongruous with our institutions and the spirit of Christian civilization, as was that of Southern Slavery, could continue to exist in our social system without giving rise to a violent conflict of opinions, or that it could ever be eliminated—cast out—without a horrid convulsion and great temporary calamities. That this element was not introduced under our present Government, and that the present conflict did not originate in any act of aggression on our part, should be our consolation. It should reconcile us to any sacrifices, to any amount of suffering, which might be necessary to uphold the authority of the National Government, to maintain its integrity, and to vindicate the great principles upon which it was founded. He thought he saw the light shining brighter and brighter. The people were becoming more united and more earnestly resolved upon the one great object—the restoration of peace and unity and freedom to this great nation. Let us thank God and take courage; let us look to Him who could speak peace to the raging winds and waves. Let us seek to nourish in our breasts and in each others' souls a spirit of elevated and unselfish devotion to the good of our country. Let us spread abroad everywhere, but especially among those classes who needed so much its restraining influence, the blessed gospel of peace and righteousness. Let us pray for those who were fighting against us. Let us keep our hearts free from malice and hatred, and so let us look forward to the blessed day when, all causes of dissension being removed, we might once more embrace as brethren, and strive together thenceforth for whatsoever ends were honest, pure, amiable, lovely and of good report.

Sermon by Rev. Dr. Bellows.

Thanksgiving services were held at the Church of All Souls, Unitarian Church, corner of Fourth-avenue and Twentieth-street. The large congregation filled every part of the edifice. Rev. Mr. Osgood, of the Church of the Messiah, opened the services, and made a fervent prayer to the God of Nations to preserve the heritage of our fathers. Rev. Dr. Bellows preached an eloquent sermon on the following text:

Alluding to the nation and the civil war he said, no wise man could confidently say what would be the definite end of this conflict. Notwithstanding the overwhelming power of the North, we have not yet attained absolute superiority in the field on which we so confidently reckoned. Slavery, when we termed the weakness of the South, and which we expected by emancipation to convert into an effective ally, has played no important part in our successes, and is still defended by a learned portion of its sectional friends. This war, like all wars, is uncertain in its results; it is full of paradoxes and surprises. Besides troops, military genius is requisite to success. To possess the former, troops must be had composed neither of militia nor those called out on short drafts. While the South has a regular army of two hundred thousand men, the North must possess the same numbers in order to wage a war with any likelihood of success. Slavery is the cause of the war; do it away, and the war is at an end. The systems of free and slave labor are antagonistic. Like a mated couple antagonistic in their temperaments, they finally establish a settled hatred between one another, instead of mutual forbearance with each other's peculiarities. The mass of the people of the South are impregnated with their peculiar institutions the same as the people of the North are impregnated with their diversified institutions. It is truly the voice of the people. The voice of the temple—the intelligent elevated and moral masses—seeks for the greatest good for the largest number. The advocates and supporters of the war are the most reasoning and moral portion of the people, not only in their spokesmen, but in themselves. The lukewarmness for the war is found among the less educated, the unthinking portion of the population. We will say nothing of the party leaders of this class, as they show what they are from their deeds. The soldiers themselves, to a larger extent, perhaps than we know, come from this class, who have its peculiar instincts. Instincts and feeling must be considered, as well as intelligence and intellect. Opposition to the prosecution of the war is facing away. The nation is slowly opening and shutting its eyes, and it is coming to the conclusion that it must get out of bed, and does not know which side to take. The good and wise Abraham Lincoln said, "if the national life could be saved and Slavery with it, it was his Constitutional duty so to do; if Slavery must perish to save the national life, then let Slavery perish." This sentiment has permeated the heart of the nation, and for the sake of a glorious country, and one to be thankful for, they will sacrifice their most cherished rights for a time. Time has taught the nation many lessons to be thankful for, and who knows but that the caution of Scott and McClellan are superior to the offensive qualities of other generals? It is not for my unmilitary judgment to answer this question. The voice of the noise of the City is the voice of the people; and the voice of the temple—the representatives of the people—articulate and make significant the voice of noise in the City. In conclusion he applied the test literally, that the great Empire City had a powerful influence in directing the affairs of the nation.

The National Anthem was then sung by the congregation, and a benediction pronounced, after which the congregation dispersed.

Discourse of the Rev. Dr. Potts.

Rev. Dr. Potts, of University-place Church, Tenth-street, chose for his text Psalm cxviii., 18,19:

"The Lord hath chastened me sore, but he hath not given me over unto death! Open to me the gates of Righteousness! I will go unto them! I will praise the Lord!"

The first part of the Doctor's discourse exhibited the connection between national sins and national judgments, and the necessary intermingling of repentance with thanksgiving. He then proceeded in substance as follows: It had been said there are worse evils than war. There are. There are evils of injustice, of oppression, &c. They prevail, however, only in the degree that a nation denies the being and the rights of God. Could any wise man give a more truthful answer to the question, "From whence comes wars and fighting among you?" than that given in God's word. Sin is somewhere at the bottom of the present conflict. We find the only true prevention of wars in Godliness and Righteousness—the fundamental condition of all permanent good upon earth—the glory and majesty of which make Heaven attractive. War primarily considered is the scourge of God. The way to avert it is to cease to do evil and learn to do well. There is no code of national morals different from that which should bind the individuals. No road to noble and true national development different from that by which the individual must reach his highest dignity and security. Can nations abuse their blessings with impunity? Could they requite the favors of God with unthankfulness? Could they fail in the observance of the integral laws of justice and generous candor toward other nations? Could they foster social usages and establish social laws which necessarily operate unjustly and disgracefully upon a portion of their people? Could they put up impassable barriers which must, so long as they last, shut out the hope of advancement? Could they do any of these things and expect that they will not suffer in honor, or peace, or national security? Such questions as those could receive only one reply from those who believe in God. They involved christian truisms. These remarks applied to our own case. Why had God given us now defeat, now victory, in a contest unrivaled by any history, when we consider its circumstances? Why had he let loose upon a nation slumbering in prosperity such a catastrophe. There must be something wrong somewhere. Where was the wrong? All well knew the opinion he entertained as to the merits of the war. Many times he had said, the heaviest weight of guilty responsibility rests upon those who struck the first murderous blow at the life of the nation; who laid the first violent hands upon the home which God has established for us. God made the nation. We must be one people and live in peace with one another, or we must live in wars perpetual and destructive. Had we not touched the sore place in our social life when we uttered the word Slavery? How had the nation managed this vast and growing ulcer. One part by railing accusations, the other by equally violent rejoinder, instead of joining our forces for its removal. The first guilty error lay in the accursed Slave-trade. The next was in forming a Government which at least recognized, if it did not sanction it. Slavery, governed by laws for gain, kept millions of human beings in ignorance, and deprived them of the right and blessings of the family relation. What was been the result? The nation is threatened. The terrific evils of war do not rest exclusively on one class of the nation. They rest upon all. The grand subject has been mismanaged, and so long and perseveringly mismanaged, that now the destruction of Slavery, which is the unavoidable result, has involved the destruction of lives, wealth and happiness to an extent of which we do not yet see the end. These are the ways in which God "has chastised us sore." It remains to be seen whether we will listen to the rod, and to Him that hath appointed it. Did it not say provide ways and means to make the new inexperienced freedman a safe and useful element to society, and to rescue him from destruction, indolence and vice? Bring him under the dominion of laws and Gospel—care for him—elevate him. It was one of the reasons for thanksgiving that the conscience of the country recognizes in some degree the vital question. He lived in hope that our spirit of restitution will be such as to prove the sincerity of our national repentance. The reverend Doctor, after discussing other points of interest, remarked that in all of our troubles the politician may see chance, but the Christian can see the hand of God. The conclusion of the Doctor's discourse, which was listened to by a large audience with profound attention, was as follows: Let the nation (for it is from the nation God has a right to expect acknowledgment) show by reformed manners, large benevolence, care of those who are sufferers from the calamities of the war, increased reverence for Christian truth, that it has heard with reverence the voice of God in our affairs, and we may then hope that, as a people who understand the duties of freedom, as well as its rights, God will give us many days and a grand career.

Sermon by Rev. E. H. Chapin, D. D.

Dr. Chapin, of the Fourth Universalist Church, Broadway, selected for his text, the 6th verse of the 126th Psalm:

"He that goeth forth and weepeth, and beareth precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him."

These words were selected as peculiarly appropriate to the present occasion, associating as they do the seedtime with the harvest, and present weeping with ultimate rejoicing. The fact that this our weeping time is the season wherein seed is being sown which we have full faith will one day bear to us or our posterity, a glorious harvest of joy. The text he had chosen had reference to the Babylonish captivity, and the return of the Jews from their long exile. Thus, in its original use, the symbolism of nature was applied to national experiences. He should, upon that occasion, make a similar application of it. He thereupon reviewed the course and existing condition of our national affairs. In the field of history, in the plan of all national development, there is a succession of seedtimes and harvests. It has been, and must continue to be so, with ourselves. Two great principles have been committed to our charge, and it is our duty as a people to work out these principles conscientiously to their logical conclusion. These two principles are: I. National Life; II. Human Freedom. The seed of these great principles has taken deep root in the heart of the people. It is the tribulation of seedtime they are now enduring, but the harvest festival will surely follow.

The main points of such parts of Dr. Chapin's discourse as touched on the absorbing topics of the day, were:

I. The intrinsic evil of war itself; II. Opposition to the war by political factionists at home, who would delude the nation with false cries for "Peace! peace!" when there can be no peace; and III. External hostility to the country and her institutions; the lack of sympathy which our struggle in the cause of human freedom has elicited abroad.

These points the preacher expatiated upon. He believed no one really loved the war for its own sake save a few contractors, whose base souls, if the treasury of such transmigration were true, should hereafter animate the forms of vultures. [The audience could not, at this juncture, refrain from demonstrations of applause.] The war was indeed a terrible necessity; none the less to be lamented because it was our duty to prosecute it to the end with constancy and abiding faith in the power and will of Providence to make it the means of working out our national salvation. We are sowing the seed, the seed of effort, of sacrifice, of blood. In God's good time we should reap a bountiful reward. Yet we have occasion for thankful rejoicing, mingled with our occasion for sorrow; and, even while we sow the seed, indications of the harvest appear. Dr. Chapin referred to the morning's news, and the victory which had crowned the endeavors of the army in the West. He thought the success of Gen. Grant was a special, a tangible, cause for thanksgiving. He believed other reason for gratitude was to be found in the fact that the tendency of the war would be to permanently elevate our national character; that it raised the people above mere sordid calculations of selfish gain and luxury, and to create an interest in those great ideas which can alone save the national character from deterioration and decay. He particularly congratulated his hearers on the national character of the thanksgiving they were that day celebrating. He rejoiced that in its peculiar feature of nationality he could see a rebuke to and repudiation of the heresy of State Rights. [Here again the audience spontaneously broke forth in irrepressible applause.] The idea of nationality was by degrees becoming fully developed. He concluded by declaring that the people, in the gratitude which with one accord they had assembled to pray for past benefits and mercies, also meant to express their faith in God's providence, and implicit trust in the future which He designed for us.

Sermon by Rev. Dr. Thompson, of the Tabernacle.

Dr. Thompson took for his text the 37th and 38th verses of the 20th chapter of Ezekiel:

"And I will cause you to pass under the rod, and I will bring you into the bond of the covenant: and I will purge out from among you the rebels."

God designs three things by this war: To humble and chasten us for our transgressions; to establish us more firmly in the bond of our covenant—the Constitution and the Union; and to crush out forever the spirit of rebellion against free institutions, by destroying both the rebellion and Slavery.

The chief aim of Dr. Thompson's discourse was to set forth the elements of stability in a free Government, and the crime of revolution against such a Government. When a people have retained these two things a free popular form of Government, and a Constitution regulating that Government—the right of revolution ceases forever, because the conditions that would justify it can never arise. Our Government has these elements of stability: First, it is founded in and for the rights of men, not for the interests of classes. Rights stand; interests change and pass away. A Government founded on the essential rights of man has in itself the highest stability; second, our society is organized on free institutions; our rights are not grants from a superior power; but institutions that have grown with the growth of the people, and, therefore, permanent as the life of the nation; third, the governing power fairly represents the welfare of the whole people; the sovereignty is vested in the people, and all may share it; fourth, the Government is defined and regulated by a Constitution, itself amendable. This guards against abuse and excess, and provides for improvement. Such a Government is the best attainable by man. Against a Government so constituted there can be no right of revolution. A revolution to be justified must be founded in justice; but this Government is itself the highest justice and embodies all rights. A revolution must be against unbearable wrongs, and must offer the only redress; but here all wrongs may be righted; all abuses remedied, by time and peaceable measures, without recourse to arms.

The preacher took up three rebellions, spoken of by Earl Russell in his Blairgowrie speech, and showed that each of those was justified by its conditions; but that the last—our American revolution—exhausted the right of rebellion by securing every other right of man.

In conclusion, the authors of this Southern rebellion are guilty of a stupendous and unmitigated crime, which is an insurrection against the order of society—against the sovereignty of the people—against regulated liberty. For a free election it would substitute armed dictation at the polls, or an endless war of factions. It is an assault upon all the principles and institutions of justice and freedom in our national life. To palliate this rebellion, therefore, is to share its criminality. He who would wink at it cannot be the friend of his country, the friend of its Constitution, the friend of liberty. We must annihilate this rebellion in behalf of all mankind. We must show the struggling people of other nations that liberty, once won, can be maintained forever. When this rebellion is put down, and with it the pretence of revolution against a free Government, a political millenium will dawn upon the world. Then peace will be the normal condition of the State, and war, seen to be hopeless in the cause of wrong, shall no more be demanded by the necessity of right. God grant to our posterity this golden heritage, wrung from the mortal agony of this sublime, decisive hour.

Sermon by Rev. Wm. Roberts.

Rev. William Roberts, Pastor of the Thirteenth-street Welsh Presbyterian Church, delivered a short discourse, founded on the devout declaration of the Psalmist, "Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but unto Thy Name give glory, for Thy mercy, and for Thy truth's sake." Psalm cxv., 1. He observed that in returning thanks to the Lord, we ought to renounce all claim to, and participation in the glory, and ascribe it wholly to the Father of mercies. This constitutes the essence of pure gratitude and praise. And in entreating Him for deliverance from our present national troubles, our sole motive should be the glory of His Name, resting assured that He will honor them, who honor Him. Are the internal resources of the country fully adequate to our emergencies; have we been blessed with an abundant harvest; has the King Corn triumphed over King Cotton; is the intriguing counsel of the rebel leaders likely to be frustrated and abolished; is the sentiment of loyalty gaining the ascendency in the land; are our armies and navies achieving triumphant victories; is the nursing-cradle of the rebellion on fire, and likely to be reduced to ashes; have we lately obtained splendid victories at Chattanooga through our valiant soldiers under Gens. Thomas, Grant, Hooker, &c., let us exclaim with feelings of profound gratitude, "Not unto us, but unto Thy Name give glory." We may gratefully acknowledge the services of men as instruments; but let us supremely honor the Great Arbiter of all events, regarding all others as means employed by Him. More of God and less of the man. Do the signs of the times tell us that tyranny, oppression and Slavery, mental and physical, are on the eve of abolishment? Let us thank God and take courage. Do England and France refrain from recognizing the Confederate States as a Government, and from interfering in our civil quarrels? Whatever may be their motives, let us give the glory to God. Whether they are influenced by their enacted laws of freedom, or by principles bearing on self-preservation and safety; if the disturbed state of Europe restrains them; if the insurrection in Poland, or the peril attending the aggrandizement of power in Mexico retard their progress in this direction; if the arrival of the Russian fleet in our harbor has had any influence upon them; if the orations of Rev. H. W. Beecher have been the means of enlightening their minds concerning the righteousness of our cause—let us give the glory to Him, who emphatically declares "I will not give my glory to another, nor my praise to graven images."

At the conclusion of his address, the Reverend gentleman invited four of the brethren to lead successively in prayer. The address and the prayers were delivered in the ancient British language, and the perfect eloquence of the minister must have carried conviction to the patriotic bosoms of his countrymen. The church is an exceedingly neat and chaste edifice.

Sermon by Hen. Ward Beecher.

Plymouth was crowded yesterday both by members of his congregation and many strangers. The exercises were commenced as usual by the singing of a hymn, reading of the scriptures, and a fervent and eloquent prayer, enumerating the reasons for thanksgiving and asking continuance of the same mercies and blessings.

After the singing of an anthem, Mr. Beecher took the text for his sermon from Psalms, 118th chapter, and 13th, 14th and 15th verses.

"Thou hast thrust sore at me that I might fall: but the Lord helped me. The Lord is my strength and song, and is become my salvation. The voice of rejoicing and salvation is in the tabernacles of the righteous; the right hand of the Lord doeth valiantly."

After referring very briefly to the scriptural view of the text, Mr. Beecher continued by saying that when the President's Proclamation for this Thanksgiving was read in England, the London Times, that weathercock of newspapers, made itself merry over the idea of giving thanks for anything that might take place in America in our present situation. There would be little to give thanks for if we were of those to whom God has denied faith and conscience. But we find transcendent mercies mingling with our afflictions. Our night has been long, its hours dark, its dreams troubled, its watching most weary. But it has had its stars too; and they have led on the morning whose twilight is now already on the hills. Our day is at hand; the nation is to live. It has gone through severe trial; it has been tested in fire; it has proved itself to be capable of moral rejuvenescence. Not the strength of our hand, but the strength of our hearts is the sign that God means to save us; not our increasing military success, but the growth of the popular determination that victory shall represent liberty—not mere brute superiority—this is the sign of the future; and in this sign we shall conquer. Both sides in this connect are American. If either conquer, what then? It is not the French against the English; it is not the Russian against the Turk; it is not the conflict of races with us. It is the same people in sad conflict, and it means nothing if it does not ingain something moral. The distinction between Northern and Southern armies is to be found in the principles for which they contend. We are fighting for the life of the nation, that it may represent liberty on this continent; and they are fighting for independence, that they may be let alone to build up a system of servitude that will tower up in the world like a mountain of iniquity. Let us pause on the threshold of our thanksgiving to give a word to the martyrs that have fallen. The noblest courage, patience and endurance have been manifested. The young men of the country have fallen by thousands on the field. Would that the young men of the South who have died were not so utterly dead. Would that they had died fighting so bravely for a better cause. They die, indeed, who die for Slavery, and the lapse of years will only make their oblivion more certain. No future historian will feel an enthusiasm in recovering their names to our records of a great nation. No future millions will rejoice over their graves, and the only words that charity can write over the burial places will be, "Let their names and faults be forgotten." But how bright a record is there for those who have died in the defence of their country. Those that die for a good cause are redeemed from death. They hover as a cloud of witnesses over the nation; they speak louder than we can speak to inspire the people with more earnest devotion and heroic patriotism. He that is dead was your son; now he is the nation's; he was your brother; he is now the brother of every man that loves his country. He was yours—he is ours. Not one name shall be forgotten of all the generous host. Neither are they less honored who shall bear through life the marks of their battle service. The nation will honor them, so that a strong men shall covet those who limp. Children shall flock with loving reverence to look upon those whose hands can do no more work; whose feet can no more march except toward the common bourne. The nation will not forget those whose blood gave vital currents to her heart. Mr. Beecher then referred to various reasons for which we should be thankful. There has been a marvellous continuance of good harvests, and God, who has rained manna upon the chosen people in the wilderness, has seemed to give his command to nature that, while we pass over the desert to the promised land, we shall not fail. We have been continued in singular health, and the plagues usual in Southern ports, so counted on as one of the ends of rebellion in driving out the Northern armies, have been withheld as by special providence. We are to be thankful for the stability of society. The riots were a lesson and taught us that all who favored Slavery carried death in their garments. We have found that we can live without the South and without foreign sympathy, by our own industry. We have had unwonted prosperity. No schools, churches or charitable institutions have been closed. We have worn the garments of peace and carried the arms of war. The North is only fighting with its left hand, the plow and the pen are in its right hand still. Time is success to us and defeat to our enemies. We grow; they rot. The best thing the North has learned is how to make men. And this war has shown what kind of men it has made. We have been spared a foreign war. We should thank that large class of French people who have been our friends in France, and have said to the Emperor, "If a needless war is picked with the North, we will stop your axes and revolutionize." We have to remember the friendship of Russia, though it has been a friendship induced only by similarity of interests. She is an autocracy, and in any step toward despotism the United States should be against her. We should remember the working classes of Lancashire. They have not swerved in their sympathy for us in the face of starvation. They are heroes. Let us not forget the other noble friends we have in England among all the professions. Let us not forget those few among the nobility of England who have stood by justice against themselves. They were made nobles both by nature and the State. Let us remember that we have had a firm friend in the Sovereign of England. When our flag shall be unfurled with the inscription "Victory" upon it, it will not be an uniting alliteration if the flag inscribed "Victoria" shall wave by its side. [Great Applause.] Mr. Beecher concluded as follows:

We owe a debt of deep gratitude to God for the Chief Magistrate of our land. He is wisely and surely pioneering the way to the liberty of this nation. One man there was whom God's hand had ordained to break our foreign bondage. If it were possible to honor more than him another whom God has ordained to break the bondage of a worse oppression in our land, then the second should be greater than the first: but joined together one and inseparable, we shall hereafter hear on jubilees the shouts "Washington and Lincoln"—The Fathers." [Long continued applause.] Let us remember those that cannot remember themselves, nor make a sign in our midst. I desire to express my profound gratitude for that eminent and evident interposition of divine Providence, which has been manifested in the good conduct of the people descended from Africans in our midst. I thank God for that wonderful wisdom, which they that are yet unchained and within the lines of bondage have manifested. It was in their power to have done themselves and us much mischief by giving way to their own intemperate desires or feelings. But they have been held in the hollow of God's hand, nor can you nor can any man remember in any newspaper or in any man's mouth one word of complaint for three years to have been uttered, one word of fault to have been found with the great mass, the millions of men that heard the war for liberty thundering within their reach; yet they maintained quiet patience, waiting for the revelation of God's mercy toward them. I thank God for the patience, for the conscientiousness in conduct of these men, whom it has been our wont to hear represented as monsters who only wanted the chance to carry riot and rapine throughout the world. Never were a people so many and so tempted that behaved so well under such circumstances as the slaves of the South. And those that have become freedmen, how have they helped us! I mean not so much by their labor, but by manifesting this truth—which we have witnessed, and which we have believed, and which has been universally disputed—that a man brought out suddenly from Slavery into liberty is not dangerous; that it is safe to emancipate. There are some men that are still by force of old legendary lore talking about the dangers of emancipation. Round from the Delta of the Mississippi for fifteen hundred miles till you touch the coast of North Carolina there has been one wide belt of emancipation, yet point me to a mischief or an irregularity. I bring the testimony of our officers, Southern born or Northern, that they are behaving worthy of their liberty—it is safe to emancipate. [Applause.] I thank God that while we were striving for the right of humanity in colored men He, by His Providence, that is so much wiser than the wisdom of the wisest, has led them to demonstrate what we are trying to prove, and to demonstrate it so as to reach just that apprehension that needs to be met. The black soldiers that have been regimented and taken to the field, by their courage, by their docility and good conduct under the most fiery trials have shown that they were men. I am sorry that so large a part of human society yet lies so low that the capacity of a man to show the courage of an animal is the best test that he is a man, but so it is. There is nothing that will make the common people so quickly sympathize with an African as the knowledge that he fights well. Well, he does fight well. He is a man because he fights. [Laughter and applause.] And although war is not thought to be a civilizer, men may have been held so low that even war is elevation, and so it is with the colored people; they go up a great way before they have a right to touch the sword, and when they have laid their hands on it, the heroism of it fires their hearts, and with it they hew their way, rugged and narrow as it is, much higher. And when, after this war, a hundred thousand colored men can show their scars, or that they have seen hard service bravely, I will put these men before the nation and say, they have put their blood for your blood, and helped to sustain your laws; will you allow them or their kind to be trampled under foot any more? [Applause.] It is fit that these who have been so long the subjects of injustice should help earn their own liberties, and their own standing in human society. And lastly, let us this morning see how much brighter is the cheer of victory which comes to our ears now from the recent conflicts in the West than even this bright sun that stands in the heaven dispersing its beams and cheering all hearts and all eyes. Oh! brighter than the sun and sweeter than its benign influence to us is the light that streams from the Stars and Stripes that in that distant land are borne victorious over the foe. [Applause.]

Mr. Beecher then read the last dispatch from Chattanooga, announcing Gen. Grant's complete victory. It was received with applause.

He continued: And so, if you are not, in view of all the considerations which I have urged this morning, grateful and thankful, and if these tidings that crown the day do not make you grateful and thankful then ask God to change your heart and give you a heart of flesh instead of a heart of stone. [Great applause.] And while you rejoice and give thanks now in this hour of happiness cleanse your heart from revenge; cherish sentiments of generosity and kindness toward those that are strangely misled; pray for your enemies; pray for the slave; forget not the sick and wounded; forget not those that are worse wounded in the tidings of their dead; remember the bereaved; remember all who are praying today that God would remember them. Let us unite in prayer for the sick and wounded.

The services were closed by a prayer and hymn.

Discourse of Rev. Dr. Stephen H. Tyng, Sr. George's Church.

Text—Therefore have I set my face like a flint, and I know that I shall not be ashamed.—Isaiah, l., 7.

The great scheme of the operation of the Gospel among men, its whole relation to man, was a warfare. All its successes on earth were triumphs over hostility, won by the most persistent and self-denying purpose, and the very state of this earthly experience was called militant, and every attribute and element of the severest and most active earthly warfare was divinely employed to illustrate the relations and duties of those who profess and defend it. This was also equally true of every particular detail in this great warfare. To cease the warfare was to give up the race of man to the undisguised and unrelaxing dominion of the most abominable guilts and the most debasing crimes—crimes equally subversive of the law of God and destructive of the happiness of man. The Lord's purpose and its reason presented us a great principle of action—"I have set my face as a flint, and I know I shall not be ashamed. I am perfectly sure I am right in the end I pursued and in the stand I take, and I cannot give up; and if I know I am wrong, my instant, highest duty is to recede, and if I doubt the justice of my course and the obligation of its pursuit, my duty is to consider and to examine, that I may be thoroughly persuaded in my own mind." No man can work effectively against the secret protest of his own heart and conscience. If I am convinced, I am right; my path is clear and my duty is fixed and imperative. Our annual Thanksgiving Day found us in the midst of a war still unfinished, and surveying a field of contest crowded with elements of difficulty. Probably no people were ever more heavily burdened with the responsibility of moral issues and social questions involved. We certainly, as a people, had much for which to be thankful in a survey of the past—in looking at the immense territory rescued from rebellion, at the victories gained in every part of the field of warfare, at the liberation of the multitudes of slaves from bondage, at the overwhelming assaults which the system of Slavery has received, at the changes of public sentiment concerning it, at the honor of our armies and navy, at the successful management of our finances, at the respect which our Administration has commanded at home and abroad, at the enlarged changes of public sentiment concerning our struggle, at the advanced sympathy with the great principles for which we are contending, and at the homeward prevailing of a loyal sentiment among our own people toward the Government which they are required to support. We had boundless cause for thankfulness in our section of country for abounding harvests, and prosperity in all branches of business. We had peculiar calls for gratitude for deliverance from an overwhelming mob and all the fury of anarchy, conflagration, murder—all demonstrating in their awful contrast the imperative necessity of the principles of freedom for which we contended. But the great question was of our relation to the contest in which the nation was engaged. Asked to vote, to act, to speak, we could not be negative, silent, or neutral, in such a crisis. Hearing the groans of our prisoners starving to death in brutal captivity in the hands of the rebels; seeing the sorrows of families unnumbered, and their brightest and their best yielded up to death in the carnage of the field, marking the multitudes remaining lingering in hospitals, or wandering in crippled weariness around our homes, having lists of hundreds and thousands who have been given a willing and costly sacrifice to the accomplishment of our victories, we could not avoid the question, "Is the Cause an adequate reason? Is the result an adequate recompense? How could we yield our country to dismemberment and overthrow at the hands of violence? It was shining. It was intended to shine, as the attractive home of all who loved the conjoined dominion of liberty, order and peace. How could we give it up? No cost in maintaining it was too great for the end in view. It must not be yielded. How could we consign a helpless, unoffending race to perpetual bondage, stripes and death, that sensual idleness might live on the avails of compulsory and unrequited labor? Their sufferings hung around the nation's neck, a weight intolerable; their sorrows and their blood unavenged cried out against their oppressors. There would be no liberty or security to this nation if it perpetuated the injustice and left them in bondage still. We were asked to yield these to the dominion of a barbarism which made labor contemptible and placed luxurious idleness on the throne of power and set up mere material, sensual indulgence as the only ruling power and purpose of human life. All the great interests of civilization, and liberty, and religion, were involved in it. It was for these great ends of human advancement, for which the gospel plead, in anticipation of which the whole race of man had been unconsciously and earnestly looking and pressing forward, as the centuries have gone by. What this triumph might cost him (the speaker,) or others, he knew not; what sacrifice he must lay down on the altar of his sincerity in it, he knew not; but surveying as he did this day, with the gratitude which belonged to the importance of its principles and results to man, the privileged character of their alternatives, the vast interests in human welfare to be carried by stern and unflinching perseverance, and the unmeasured evils which may arise from a tame and cowardly submission, he could not but say, and beg every one of them to say, in the very language of triumph which the text presented, "I have set my face as a flint, and I know that I shall not be ashamed."

Rev. H. B. Ridgaway, Fourth-avenue M. E. Church.

Rev. Mr. Ridgaway's text was taken from the 12th verse of the 7th chapter of the First Book of Samuel:

"Then Samuel took a stone and set it between Mizpeh and Schem, and called the name of it Ebenezer, saying, Hitherto hath the Lord helped us."

The preacher spoke of the custom in accordance with which they had assembled for purposes of thanksgiving. The language which swells upon our lips is "Let all the people praise Him; for He is good and His mercy endureth forever." The passage chosen for his text occurs in the narrative of one of the numerous and striking interpositions of Jehovah for the deliverance of his people in Israel out of the hands of the Philistines. Israel had defeated their enemy, and Samuel had summoned them to join in thanksgiving to God for the victory he had vouchsafed them. Up to that point the Lord had helped his chosen people. Has the Lord helped us hitherto? If so, wherein? The preacher proceeded to show how we had been the recipient of special mercies; how the harvests had been unusually plenteous; how the drain upon our population had been supplied by a useful immigration from abroad; how our commercial and industrial prosperity had never been surpassed; how the war had produced a growing unity of patriotic sentiment and a higher development of national consistency; how, by degrees, we had secured a claim to the respect and sympathy of foreign nations; how, in the triumphs which attended our arms, God had shown us marked and constant favor; finally, how, through all our time of national trouble, the Church had enjoyed an unexampled season of peace. In conclusion, he said, we may reasonably hope that the regeneration of our country is going on and approximating completion—moving onward to the realization of a true christian manhood, of a just and pure liberty. Let there be no hurry, but a patient following of the divine leading, "God as His own interpreter." Forced as the sober, peace-loving masses of the North have been into this unnatural strife for the preservation of self-existence and self-respect, we shall trust that they will emerge from the conflict into a higher, purer, juster civilization. From the fields of heroic daring, from the hiding places of persecuted loyalty, from the chambers of breaking, loving hearts, from the counsels of stern, earnest thinking, from the altars of fervent prayer, from the pulpit of faithful, fearless preaching, from the throes and paroxysms of the nation's second birth, will issue the amplest and sublimest materials of creative genius for the chisel, the pencil and the pen. Ere long, under the divine blessing, if true to ourselves, we may hope for peace—peace upon the basis of a restored Union; a Union not of form simply, of detached parts with conflicting interests: but a unification of the ideas, sentiments, habits and laws of the people of the whole country; a unity which shall be the result of the melting down and fusing of all the political and social elements into one grand nationality; its inspiration, Liberty; its expression, the repose of conscious Rectitude and Strength; its crown, Order and Law; and its scepire, Plentcousness and Peace.

Sermon of Rev. I. S. Kulloch, in the Laight-street Baptist Church.

"In every thing give thanks."—I Thessalonians, v, 18.

Thanksgiving is a duty. Under all circumstances and in all things we are to give thanks. It is never so bad with us as it might be. It is never so bad as it would be if we had our deserts. Even in time of war, there is much to be thankful for. War, even civil war, is not the worst thing. Degradation, stupidity, the insensibility that can neither feel nor resent an injury, is as much worse than war, as war is worse than holy peace? As death is preferable to life purchased at the price of honor, so is war, in its bloodiest strides and ghastliest calamities, infinitely preferable to national peace purchased at the price of national degradation. There never would have been any war if every tyranny could have had its way. But what kind of a peace would it have been? True, war is an unutterable calamity. Even in this glad day of thanksgiving, while the glad news of victory cheers every heart and nerves every arm, there are bleeding bosoms, and fast-falling tears, and desolated homes, and a far-running chill of orphanage, and widowhood, and death. Brave-hearted bleed that we may rejoice; gallant heroes fall that our liberties may stand.

"We mourn for those the early dead,
Who sleep in glory's crimson grave,
Still may their names a watchword be
To the sad land they died to save."

May their memories incite us to a worthy completion of what they have so worthily begun. In order to this we need: 1. A just conception of the nature and magnitude of the contest. It has an important bearing upon Slavery, and its end will be the end of Slavery. But that is not all. It affects not only black men, but white men; not only America, but the world. Slavery is rather the pretext than the cause of the rebellion. It is the culmination of the old feud between the Roundhead and the cavalier, between the democratic and the aristocratic classes, between civilization and barbarism. The blow which ends this mad rebellion will be heard in the shout of the struggling patriot, and the sundering of the bondman's fetters, everywhere! Our soldiers, then, are called to the simple and sanctified defence of their country. It is no war of personal ambition or of territorial aggrandizement that calls them to the field. In a larger view, they fight in defence of the moral constitution of human nature; in defence of truth, and order, and liberty throughout the world. 2. We need confidence in our rulers. They are only men. Some of them may be we know men. Some of them may be bad men. But they are at the head. Their interest is more personal, direct, palpable than ours. No man can have as many motives as Abraham Lincoln to desire immediate success. Let us watch them closely, but trust them wisely. Let us not be for the Government and against the Administration, or what amounts to about the same thing, for the war, but against all the means of its successful prosecution!

Sermon by Rev. S. M Isaacs.

At the Wooster-street Synagogue, services were held at 3 o'clock, embracing the usual afternoon prayers, conducted by Rev. S. M. Isaacs, the Prayer for the Government and appropriate hymns, after which an address was delivered by Myer S. Isaacs, Esq., son of the minister. He commenced with a reference to the peculiar significance of the present day of thanksgiving, observed as it was by all Americans, wherever resident, in response to the recommendation of the Executive. It was a grand spectacle, an entire nation united in offering up incense on an altar of a religion all alike profess—thanksgiving and praise to the Supreme Being. Divesting themselves of social, political and religious distinctions, superior to the division of sentiment engendered by sectional ideas and antagonistic theories, they assembled in their respective places of worship, to pour forth praises to Him enthroned on high. Actuated by these considerations, his audience had gathered together in their house of God, that they too might join in the grand anthem swelling upward to celestial heights. Israelite and Christian grasped each other's hand in cordial confidence, working together, fighting together the battles of the Union, pouring their blood on the battle-field in friendly rivalry for country's sake. There was no trace of religious intolerance or sectional feeling in the proclamation of the day; we were called upon to observe it as Americans, acknowledging special obligations to Heaven for the providences so graciously displayed in the progress of our struggle for national existence, and not unmindful of His divine favor in the daily blessings unintermittingly showered upon us, whose value we often fail to discern until we are deprived of them.

He then took his text from Psalm c., verses 4 and 5, discussing it from its various points of view, and earnestly directing attention to the necessity of sincerity in this observance of National Thanksgiving. The stake was too mighty a one to permit even the semblance of insincerity in the history we were making, in our professations of patriotism. It is understood now, that our love of country is not purely romantic, but that we were in earnest in our expressions of determination to reestablish the national supremacy, to permit no factious assemblage, no treasonable power, however desperate, to maintain an eternal antagonism to the constituted authorities.

Were we equally sincere in our observance of Thanksgiving, in our expressions of dependence upon God, of our own unworthiness and His eternal goodness and truth? This was to be the lesson of the day. He then illustrated his text by a reference to the peculiar benefits the Israelites of America enjoy in this land of thorough civil and religious liberty. We should enter His gates with thanksgiving, His courts with praise, "for here there was no distinction recognized between Jew and Gentile in the guaranty by the Constitution of protection in the enjoyment of the sacred rights of man.

Returning to the broader view of the subject, as Americans, we should signalize the sincerity of this observance by an amendment in those respects where we acknowledge national faults. Although we have demonstrated a stauncher patriotism than we ourselves believed to be inherent in American character, there may be more sacrifices to make, more selfish considerations to combat, more errors of administration to deplore and divest of their apparent danger to the State by a confirmed determination to strengthen the hand of those we have chosen to preside over our national destinies. In conclusion, he spoke of the favorable prospect before us, as contrasted with the gloom, astonishment and despondency at the culmination of the preparation for the war upon our flag. The ship of state, madly tossed upon an unknown sea, exposed to the dangers of the warring elements, her pilots surrendered to the guilt of the hour or sadly inexperienced, was now sailing majestically into a safe harbor, a clear head and a steady hand at the helm; but God be thanked for this great salvation—no human wisdom or power hath accomplished this.

He closed with a fervent prayer for the continuance of Divine favor to the land, and its speedy restoration to peace and prosperity.

Sermon by Rev. Dr. Vinton, Trinity Church.

How strange that we were enjoined to give thanks in everything. Yet such was the command of God, and this command had its reasonable ground in God's sovereignty and in man's dependence—in God's love and man's selfishness. The Apostle urges us to give thanks by this argument; that it is the will of God in Christ Jesus concerning us. But our civil rulers had been seen calling the people to give thanks simply like heathens rather than as the vicegerents of the Lord Jesus Christ, summoning us to adore a heavenly power, rather than the triune God of perfection, of grace and salvation. Yet the Apostle will not have us forget Him. Give thanks, then, first of all things, for the love of God in redemption, in the gift of the Gospel and the church, and the sacred ministry and body sacrament whereby the nations that sat in darkness had been which had marked the past year, and which the people, as a whole, continued so richly to enjoy. He did not forget, he said, that while he thus spoke, we are in the midst of a most terrible and bitter civil war. He did not forget that the fire upon a thousand hearthstones had gone out—that the land was full of widows and of orphans—that habitations once as joyous and hopeful as our own, are turned into houses of lamentation and woe. He did not lose sight of these dismal realities, and yet he did not hesitate to affirm that the blessings enjoyed by the nation, as a whole, are not only far greater than the nation's deserts, but also that the blessings conferred exceed immeasurably the calamities experienced. In this connection, he glanced briefly at the extraordinary deliverances and the manifest divine interpositions of the past year—not omitting to make mention of the disgraceful riots which threatened the destruction of our city in July last, and of the triumphant vindication of the majesty of law and the restoration of social order which followed.

From this review the preacher passed to the more particular consideration of the great doctrinal truth embodied in the text, and to the application of that truth to the state of the nation. "Blessed be thou, Lord God of Israel, our father, forever and ever. Thine, O Lord, is the greatness and the power, and the glory, and the victory, and the majesty." He showed the perfect harmony between the recognition, to the full extent, of the Divine sovereignty, and the highest exercise of human skill and agency of every kind. It is God that giveth "victory." Man cannot organize victory, so as certainly to insure it; but man must work out victory according to the will of God, with all appropriate means and diligence. This truth was still further expounded and viewed in various applications.

In conclusion, the speaker stated, as inferences from the subject discussed: First—Humility. If the essential greatness and power are of God, man has nothing to boast of. The need of our nation, at this time, is the just recognition of God in all things, and a humility corresponding thereto.

Secondly—A wise use of the prosperity which God has given us. Is this a time, when the nation, as such, is passing through the terrible ordeal of fire and blood—is this a time for extravagant folly and display, and for wasting in riotous living the means which a bounteous Providence has placed at our disposal for the relief of the suffering and the sorrowing?

The sermon concluded with an earnest exhortation to cultivate feelings of kindness and good-will to all, even to our enemies; while, at the same time, we bate not one jot of energy and determination in supporting the Government and in maintaining the inheritance bequeathed to us by our fathers.

I am sure, said the speaker, that every truly loyal heart, and especially every loyal Christian heart, will unite with me in the doxology of the text, "Now, therefore, our God, we thank thee and praise thy glorious name."

Sermon by Rev. Dr. Morgan.

Thanksgiving services were held at St. Thomas' Church, corner of Broadway and Houston-street, attended with all the impressive Episcopalian forms, before a large congregation. Rev. Dr. MORGAN was assisted in the services by Rev. Dr. RICHARDSON. The National Hymn was rendered with fine effect by the choir, under the direction of Mr. ALBERT WOOD. Rev. Dr. MORGAN took for his text, Isaiah xxxviii., 18, 19, as follows:

"For the grave cannot praise Thee; death cannot celebrate Thee. * * * * The living, the living, he shall praise Thee as I do this day; the father to the children shall make known thy truth."

After some introductory remarks in explanation of the text and of the festival, the reverend preacher proceeded as follows: "Were I to hold the idea of unmingled gloom, facts, appearances, Providences, and this bright morning would contradict me. It is true that a great calamity rest upon us—a great cloud overshadows us; that God's wise purposes do not ripen as fast as our moral hopes and desires. But God is with us as He was with our fathers. What befits us in our present condition is a stern and solemn earnestness. It is a day for work, for sacrifice, for endurance; not for empty prophecies or giddy calculations of loss and gain. It may not be the divine pleasure that we shall see the end of this contest. We may leave the stage, as thousands have done already, who, at the outset, were as eager as we are for the end. Our duty, therefore, is to meet the exigencies and demands of the present hour, as living men, to do our part, and do it well. We praise God for the work of progress. Our praise does not presuppose our end of trouble, or our end of strife; it simply recognizes what the Lord hath already wrought. Hitherto the Lord has done great things for us, whereof we are glad. What if the next breath—the next vibration along the wires, should be reverse? What if the cry along these streets should spoil our palates with the news of lamentable disaster? It would not tarnish the glory of those lion-hearted men who have periled their lives in the high places of the field, or of those who

"Have sunk to rest
With all their country's wishes blest."

It could not diminish by one jot or tittle our absolute duty to advance with unbroken courage upon the final and the most forlorn hope, and to redeem, with the last drop of blood, if need be, those precious interests which are imperiled. As the living, we are to stand in our lot and maintain the right, and transmit the inheritance of our progenitors; and though Gebel and Ammon and Ameleth be confederated against us, to stand, and having done all to stand. The benediction having been pronounced, the congregation slowly dispersed.

Sermon by Rev. Frederick G. Clark.

The West Twenty-third-street Presbyterian Church was filled yesterday to listen to the sermon of Rev. Mr. CLARK, entitled "Rest in the Lord—A Political Idea." Psalm xxxvii., 7.

"Rest in the Lord, and wait patiently for Him; fret not thyself because of him who prospereth in his way, because of the man who bringeth wicked devices to pass."

The preacher represented rest in the Lord as the most sublime of human experiences. It is the greatest idea which can take possession of the soul. Its best sphere is in circumstances which seem desperate to ordinary observation.

This is a political idea historically, as it grew up in the soul of the Psalmist. David represented in his person all the interests of the Jewish state. He was persecuted because God had chosen him to lead Israel. In his struggles the nation was struggling for unity and perpetuity. And the national integrity and glory which were secured under David were due most of all to the power of this principle. In every political combination the most real and the most potent element is the one usually lost sight of. The most unstable successes are those which exist under the pressure of God's providence. That thing is furthest possible from being settled which is settled wrongly. Our text points toward a great law of Divine distribution—a law which can be traced through the political life of all nations. God is all the time at work in undermining evil. He has laid underlay all the forces of his intellect and all the resources of His omnipotence, that He may everywhere, sooner or later, disappoint the workers of iniquity. The blunders and miscarriages of wicked men are not lucky accidents. They are the inevitable law of wrong-doing. They are but the working out of God's plan to disappoint the devices of the crafty. There is a terrible law of retribution which God is steadily acting out in the history of nations. The sword of the wicked shall enter into their own heart. Haman built a gallows on which he meant that Mordecai should hang. Soon after we find Haman himself died on that very gibbet. This tragedy of Esther's day was no mere incident. It was a symbol of the eternal plan of God to make men drink the wormwood of their own iniquity. I will find you this principle written all over the Bible. I will show you it printed on the history of nations; "Whoso diggeth a pit shall fall therein, and he that rolleth a stone, it will return upon him." What a book that would be which should record the histories of retaliatory retribution! Saul should appear slain on Mount Gilboa, by those same Philistines into whose hands he plotted so long to deliver David. Here, too, should figure the famous Adonibezek, with his thumbs and his great toes cut off, and we should hear him confess: "Three score and ten kings, having their thumbs and their great toes cut off, gathered their meat under my table; as I have done, so God hath requited me." Here, too, should be Rome, trampling nations under her iron heel, and then in her turn trodden down by barbarian hosts.

Poland was an oppressor once. Over 800 years ago she swept over Bohemia, Moravia and Russia, carrying chains, captivity and death. Ask Poland to-day if God is just. NAPOLEON settled the account of Providence with Russia when he slept in her royal palaces and burnt her cities. But NAPOLEON was wicked, and he too perished. In the murkiest midnight of the French power, when the armies of Napoleon had overrun all Germany, and his iron heel was pressed to her bleeding heart, the philosophical FICHTE bade his despairing countrymen be of good cheer: "The French Emperor is unjust, and he must fall, and fall at last." Resting in the Lord, we can leave our national fortunes in His hand, assured that He will not deny Himself, nor interrupt the great law of His moral government. We are content to say that this rebellion is unjust, and so it must fall at last. God will not settle this great question in a way to oppose His own character, or to give our land to a Government based on the mightiest of all iniquities. The day will come when the righteous shall dwell in the land, and the wicked shall perish, and be as the fat of lambs.

Sermon by Rev. J. C. Dutcher.

The Union Reformed Dutch Church in the Sixth-avenue, was opened for services yesterday at the usual hour. The text chosen by Mr. DUTCHER was Deut. viii., 2. "And thou shalt remember all the way which the Lord thy God hath led thee," and the discourse was relative to "our History and our Hope."

After alluding to the experience of the people to whom this injunction was addressed, and the remarkable evidences of Divine protection and government, he drew a parallel in the history of our own country. If the Israelites had reason to remember the path in which they had been led, how much reason have we as a nation, to lift our voices in thanksgiving, and to build our altars and to rear our loftiest columns in remembrance of God's dealings with us.

The preacher then showed that we should remember the way in which God has led us, that we may be filled with gratitude for the past. In a rapid and eloquent contrast between our own national history, and that of some other nations, he pointed out the privileges we had enjoyed—the prosperity and unrivaled progress of our people—the founding and development of free Constitutional Government. Looking back from the experience of nearly a hundred years, whose heart did not burn with a patriotic ardor, and whose love for his country did not rise to devotion, in view of God's goodness to us?

And from this retrospect and remembrance we come in the next place to feel a confident assurance in the future. The dealings of Providence hitherto were the guarantee of blessings yet to come.

In conclusion, Mr. DUTCHER called attention to two practical suggestions. First: Our duty to our soldiers; the memory of the brave who had fallen on every hard-fought battle-field; to the widows and orphans; to the sick and wounded survivors in every part of our land. Second: Our duty to sustain the Government even though it may err or fail in points where we would wish it otherwise. So long as the Government is striving to carry us through the hour of peril we must sustain it, until purified and redeemed we shall join in the national jubilee of thanksgiving, and our songs and loudest anthems of gratitude shall be heard to the end of time.

Sermon by Rev. A. Berky, Pastor of the German Reformed Protestant Dutch Church, in Norfolk-street, near Stanton.

The services were held in the German language. The speaker's text was Psalm 103, 1st to 4th verses, and the words are very appropriate on the present occasion, assembled as we are in the house of God, on the day set apart by our Chief Magistrate, to thank God for the temporal and spiritual blessings which He has been pleased to bestow upon us as a people.

Have we come here to-day with a just sense of the goodness of God upon our minds? Has every one, with sincere feelings of thankfulness, expressed his dependence upon the Perserver of men in words like these: "Bless the Lord, O my soul, and all that is within me bless His holy name. Bless the Lord," etc.

After an urgent appeal to his congregation to show their gratitude to God for his many mercies and blessings, the speaker then referred to the present state of the country. He considered this war as a just chastisement of God for our sins and ungratefulness as a people, who had been so significantly blessed with God's richest blessings; but, while God had thus justly chastised us, He at the same time had not withholden His blessings, had granted us perhaps greater prosperity than at any time heretofore, had given success to our efforts to suppress the rebellion, so that we had now every indication and prospect of a speedy restoration of the Union, universal freedom, and that our country will again become an asylum for the oppressed of all nations.

THANKS, FEASTINGS AND HAPPINESS.

THE LADIES' HOME MISSION AT THE FIVE POINTS.

No man, woman or child in the vicinity of the Five Points went to bed hungry last night. The only card of invitation necessary to obtain a good dinner was a clean face, and if any little one had not this prima facie evidence of a holiday about her, kind-hearted ladies were on hand with soap and towels to secure it. At the Ladies' Mission, on the site of the Old Brewery, 500 children belonging to the school and Sunday School, sat down to a substantial dinner, supplied by the liberality of our large hotel proprietors and private citizens. The children were not only provided for internally, but externals were looked after, every boy and girl receiving a new suit of clothes; and this was not all, for through the kindness of some of the wholesale toy dealers in Broadway, Maiden-lane and John-street, the Superintendent, Mr. SCHARPER, was enabled to give every member of the school a beautiful present. The hotels have given nobly to this Thanksgiving dinner. Mr. CROOK, No. 74 Chatham-street, gave a monster loaf of bread—a "swamp angel"—which, although it weighed 300 pounds, was not in the least bit heavy. Every good thing was abundantly provided, and hundreds of bright, clean, happy little children blessed the benevolent givers.

THE FIVE POINTS HOUSE OF INDUSTRY.

At the Five Points House of Industry the children are lodged as well as fed, all the year round; but Thanksgiving Day is a special occasion with them, and the charitable people of New-York never disappoint them. Tables were spread in every available room, loaded with fat turkies, juicy little pigs, pies, cakes, jellies, every kind of delicacy that delights the heart of a hungry child; and the kind smiles and pleasant words of the ladies who waited upon them, made every little one feel that he was welcome. If every one who gave, could have seen the happy children gorging themselves without stint, upon unaccustomed good things, they would have been amply repaid for their trouble.

JOHN W. FARMER, NO. 47 LUDLOW-STREET.

Mr. FARMER invited the wives and children of our volunteers to eat Thanksgiving dinner with him, and about 240 accepted the invitation. From twelve o'clock noon until nine at night his abundant and hospitable table was spread, and he attended in person to receive and welcome his guests. When a little one could eat no more, Mr. FARMER crammed his pockets full and let him go. Honor be to the man who opened his house to the wives and children of our brave soldiers.

THE NEW-YORK STATE SOLDIERS' RELIEF ASSOCIATION, HOWARD-ST.

Nearly all the soldiers remaining at the Relief Association, who could get off, went home to keep Thanksgiving. To those that stayed, Col. NEVILLE, assisted by Miss HONE, of the Ladies' Relief Association, gave a real old-fashioned roast turkey and pumpkin pie Thanksgiving dinner. Rev. Dr. STRONG made a short prayer, and then over 75 soldiers made an attack upon as good a dinner as New-York markets could furnish. Nothing was spared to make them comfortable and happy.

HOME FOR LITTLE WANDERERS.

The Home at No. 37 Bowery, was crowded with little ones yesterday. Some 400 were fed in the house, and a large amount was sent to families whose little ones the limited room would not accommodate. Mr. VAN METER says he never before received such a generous response to his appeals. Besides food and presents for those under his charge, he received up to and including yesterday, over one thousand dollars. With his whole heart in the cause, he tenders his gratitude. There were interesting services held here, and so much happiness made for the little ones that they overflowed, and it could be picked up by the bushel.

THE NEWSBOYS.

The Newsboys' Lodging-house, No. 128 Fulton-street, was not forgotten this year. Last year they had no dinner at this institution, but the boys made up for it yesterday and worked off a regular edition with extras. From the stuffed appearance of those subsequently playing on the Park we conclude every one had enough. Prior to their physical enjoyment, appropriate ceremonies, in which they decorously joined, were observed.

GOOD SAMARITAN MISSION SCHOOL.

The children of the Good Samaritan Sunday Mission School attached to the Baptist Church, corner of Broome and Chrystie streets, as well as the Fourteenth Ward Industrial Saturday School attached to the same Church—1,000 in number—completely filled the galleries and sang the hymns; and, after the service, they were treated to a substantial dinner, which had been laid out in the basement at the expense of the members of the congregation.

NEW-ENGLAND SOLDIERS' RELIEF ASSOCIATION.

The inmates of this Institution were regaled with a sumptuous bill of fare for dinner. There were oyster soup, roasted turkeys and geese and chickens, giblet pies, fricasees, cold meats, various sauces and relishes, and any quantity of pastry and dessert. Col. HOWE and many members of the Association, accompanied by their wives and daughters, were present.

THE PUBLIC INSTITUTIONS

The Commissioners of Charities and Correction saw to it that those under their charge were made full beyond the average and happy. There were proper services ordered in all the Institutions, and bountiful dinners furnished at their conclusion. The Islands were illuminated with bright faces and happy hearts.

THE CHRISTIAN ALLIANCE.

Around went Rev. C. C. Goss yesterday, keeping time to the music of his wagons and dispensing the charity of the Christian Alliance. During the forenoon food was taken to a large number of poor but worthy families, and in the afternoon the wagons, heaped with bread and meat, were driven to seldom-visited localities, those in need hunted out and distribution made to them. Many interesting facts were elicited and incidents occurred during these missions of mercy, which Mr. Goss designs making the subject of a discourse.

ROSE HILL SOLDIERS' RELIEF ASSOCIATION.

The Ladies' Rose Hill Soldiers' Relief Association yesterday gave banquets to the soldiers under their care in St. Luke's, Bellevue and Central Park Hospitals. About 500 were feasted in all, the different hospitals being visited and supplied with substantials and delicacies for them. At each prayer, singing and discourses were had. The ladies waited upon the soldiers, and their kindly attentions begot many heartfelt thanks.

Necessarily, notice of the observances in very many of the institutions must be omitted. It can be said, however, that in all, public and private, were exerted and successful open mode by their managers and patrons to make full, grateful and happy their inmates.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

From Chattanooga the news grows more and more cheering. Gen. Grant has achieved the greatest success of the war. He telegraphs officially that our captures amount to fifty-two pieces of artillery, three thousand prisoners, five thousand stand of arms and ten standards. Yesterday, the rebel army was in full flight for Dalton, Ga., burning the bridges to prevent pursuit, and destroying their depots, stores and every thing that could impede their retreat. Still later dispatches represent our pursuit as vigorous in the extreme. Gens Sherman and Thomas crossed the Chickamauga yesterday forenoon, and, at 5 o'clock last night, Gen. Hooker was reported at Ringgold, Ga., full fifteen miles from the battle-field. Another battle was regarded as not improbable.

The Army of the Potomac, after all, is not likely to be stuck knee-deep in Virginia mud until next March. Our correspondent at the front sent a dispatch to Washington under yesterday's date saying that the roads were fast losing their liquefied form, and that a determination was apparent on the part of Gen. Meade to avail himself of the favorable change. A portion of the army had been pushed forward to the Rapidan, and all day yesterday skirmishing was lively between our advance and the rebel rear. It is by no means improbable that to-day, therefore, may bring about a battle. The army is in excellent condition, and hopefully eager for the contest. Lee's headquarters are now said to be at Orange Court-house, and for a few days past Mr. Jeff. Davis has been his guest, spending the time in reviewing and speech-making.

Advices from Gen. Burnside are up to the 23d. He was then considered safe, and would not only be supplied but reinforced.

Our Richmond files are up to the 24th, inclusive, but they contain no reports of the more recent operations at Chattanooga. They are full of reports regarding the occupation of Knoxville by the rebels, which hasn't come off yet. Editorially they are quite gloomy over the foreign, and peace, and currency questions. Bragg still gets a good share of criticism, which will be apt to increase hereafter. A plot among the National prisoners at Richmond, had been discovered, contemplating a general rising with a view of liberty, plunder and destruction. Correspondents lay great stress upon the impregnability of the (late) rebel position on Lookout Mountain. The clash of arms was soon expected in front of Chattanooga. They hadn't yet heard it.

GENERAL NEWS.

The steamship North Star, from Aspinwall Nov. 17, with $229,978 in treasure from California, arrived yesterday, bringing mails from South America and the Pacific Coast. The war between Guatemala and Salvador has ended, and Barrios, President of the latter Republic, evacuated the City of Salvador on the 26th ult., when the Guatemalan forces took possession. News from Quito to Oct. 31 fully confirms the report that war between New-Grenada and Ecuador is inevitable. Gen. Flores (Ecuadorian) is reported to be on the frontier with 5,000 men, and Mosquera has gathered 3,000 to oppose them.

Mrs. Semmes, an aunt of Capt. Semmes, has been arrested in Baltimore, with her daughter, and both have been held to answer the charge of an attempt to poison the United States Surgeon of of West Building Hospital, to whom they sent a bottle of wine drugged with arsenic. The mother of Gen. Winder has also been arrested, not, however, upon any charge of complicity in this affair, and has been paroled not to correspond with her friends in the South.

Middle Tennessee furnished the meat and corn for the rebel army. One hundred and fifty thousand hogs were gotten in Middle Tennessee last year, and Atlanta was a store-house for the surplus which remained after feeding the army. From this surplus the Virginia army was largely supplied. Large quantities of bacon were shipped to Virginia from Atlanta.

A report is current in Washington, according to the correspondent of the Philadelphia Ledger, to the effect that the Supreme Court, in the case of the legality of the Treasury notes, has come to a decision, but that, for prudential reasons, it will not be made public just at present.

Out of the fifteen regiments of nine months' troops from Massachusetts who went to the war, there were but one hundred and seventeen killed or died from wounds.

The full vote of Ohio, including that of the soldiers, shows Brough's majority to be: On the home vote, 61,752; on the soldiers' vote, 38,578—total, 100,320.

Paducah, Ky., is kept under continual excitement by rumors and reports of rebels in that vicinity.

The amount contributed for the relief of our prisoners at Richmond, through Mr. Fulton, of the Baltimore American, has reached $4,000.

This, that and the Other.—The Richmond journals of Monday and Tuesday, of which we received files last night, are all engaged in rehearsing the old cry, "The South never can be subdued—never; we will all perish first—all." But we are more inclined than ever to doubt this, from the fact that the same issues of these journals contain positive averments that Gen. Grant can never take Bragg's tremendous stronghold on Lookout Mountain—that it is impregnable; that the rebel army there "cannot be licked"—that it is invincible—and so on. Though the fact is, that the ink with which these rebel statements were printed was not dry when Gen. Grant had captured Lookout Mountain, not to speak of other mountains, and fifty pieces of artillery, besides five thousand small arms—and when Bragg's army had skedaddled on the double-quick—all except the thousands who were held fast in our hands as prisoners of war.

"Masterly Inactivity" the True Civil Policy Toward Slavery.

There is a class of men who stick to the idea that something positive must be done by the Federal Government to end Slavery. Even the issue of the Emancipation Proclamation, a military measure for military ends solely, does not satisfy them. They want civil power exercised, and would gladly have even a breaking down of State lines and a reconstruction of the Government itself, as the only effectual means of destroying the institution of their special abhorrence.

Now we, too, claim a good hearty hatred of Slavery. We are as anxious as any to see it under the sod, beyond resurrection. But we don't believe in making any superfluous sacrifice to get it there. Seeing that it is dying, we are quite content to let it die quietly, without any attempt to pull the house down about its ears and our own ears. This seems to us to be a very absurd sort of impatience—prompted by giddy passion rather than sober reason.

But how do we know Slavery is dying? We know it from the unanimous testimony of all personal observers of its condition. There is not a man within the Union lines South, however friendly he may be to the institution, who pretends that there is any chance whatever of its being saved, if present causes continue. Two things are killing it.

The first is the wear and tear of the war. Military operations always tend to disjoint and break up, within their scope, all the relations of society. They inevitably remit, to a greater or less extent, the social man to a state of nature. Inter arma leges silent. This is felt in every social connection, even the closest and strongest; for they all are, more or less, dependent on civil law. But it must be felt particularly in that connection, which of all others is the most forced and arbitrary—the connection between master and slave. Liberty is a natural instinct. The caged bird is not surer to fly through the parted wires than the slave, in his ordinary condition, from the broken chain—and the chain must be broken when the civil law, which alone gives its strength, passes away. There are men who complain of the Anti-Slavery war policy of the President. A policy that was anything else would not be a war policy at all. The war upon the rebellious slaveholding people of necessity involves an interruption of their laws; and unless the advancing army should make good this absence of civil rule by applying its own military power to keeping watch and ward over the slaves, and thus abandon its proper military business, the result is inevitable that the institution must melt away as the war goes on. Abraham Lincoln might be as much attached to Slavery as Jeff. Davis himself, and yet no human sagacity would enable him to fight Jeff. Davis honestly and effectually without mortal injury to Slavery. It is the war which kills Slavery, and not the man who leads the war.

The other destroying agency is open discussion. Slavery can live only in silence. There is a deadly antagonism between itself and free speech. Where the one exists the other cannot. The vitality of the one rests in pure force, and force and reason never agree. It always has been, and always will be, that force must either suppress reason or reason will subvert force. One of the first acts of the Slavery propagandists in Kansas was to pass enactments through their spurious legislature making it a felony, punishable by imprisonment and hard labor, for any man to "assert or maintain by speaking or writing that persons have not the right to hold slaves in this territory." It has been so in every Slave State, and worse. Not only have slave codes interdicted, in every one of them, all adverse discussion of the institution, but a mob power has always been at hand to take summary vengeance upon it with Lynch law. These resorts were not a mere caprice; they were a necessity. Slavery being once accepted as the prime object, there was no alternative but to protect it just in this manner. But the war has ended all that. There can be no mobs where the bayonet governs; nor arbitrary local laws where general military law is paramount. The discussion of Slavery is as free now in New-Orleans as in New-York. It is no more within the province of the Military Governor, Sedgley, to interfere with fair discussion there, than it is within the rightful power of the Civil Governor, Seymour, to interfere with it here. And in the Border States, where the civil laws still prevail, hostility to the rebellion has excited such a dissatisfaction with Slavery as its cause, that by general consent perfect freedom is allowed in arguing against the institution. The consequence of this freedom has been that Missouri has already determined to abolish it; Maryland and Delaware have put declared emancipationists in places of their highest trusts by unprecedented majorities; and Kentucky is visibly casting about to see how she can best rid herself of the curse.

We say, then, that even if the National Government had the right to institute new civil measures against Slavery, it would not be necessary. The unavoidable military operations of the war, and the free discussion which is sure to attend it, are enough of themselves to break down the institution. The Government has simply to stand quiet, and let these agencies work.

But we go further, and say, that any further interference would not only be superfluous, but positively mischievous. To insure that Slavery, when it dies, shall never rise again, you have got to depend largely upon the disposition of the Southern people. That disposition should not be needlessly embittered. It can't help becoming so if, as some propose, their States are reduced to the condition of mere territorial dependencies. Americans can never be satisfied to be underlings. Whatever the fortunes of war legitimately bring, they are sensible enough to submit to; but it is not in their spirit to consent to any permanent degradation. Undertake to deprive them permanently of their civil rights, and you simply make them your permanent enemies. Territorialize them because you hate Slavery, and the inevitable effect will be that you will only make them love Slavery the more, and hate you the more. This could not always continue. State rights, sooner or later, would have to be restored. We don't believe that three years would elapse after the close of the war before the keeping those States in a territorial condition would be abandoned as an insufferable anomaly in our system of Government. State rights once restored, the people, maddened by the thrall that had been put upon them, would be very likely to vindicate these rights by rehabilitating Slavery. Every incentive of high pride and every impulse of low spite would combine to urge this; and the National Government would have no legitimate way of preventing it.

It will never do to try to give Slavery its lasting quietus by mere arbitrary force. To secure this we have got to rely in no small measure upon reason. We must never forget that just as Force is the natural ally of Slavery, just so Reason is the natural ally of Freedom. When the South has been overcome in fair fight, we must give its reason a fair chance to assert itself. Military authority over each reclaimed State should last until the majority of the people have made up their mind to resume, in good faith, their old relations to the Government, and have had a fair opportunity to canvass how that resumption shall best be inaugurated. Of course the machinery of the State Government cannot be given over to traitors; but whenever there is sound reason to believe that a fair loyal majority of the State want it, let them have it—and that, too, without imposing any conditions concerning Slavery. If this just and rational policy is faithfully carried out, and no arbitrary issues are foisted in to impose a sense of subordination, we have not a doubt that every Slave State will follow the emancipating policy which the Border States, of their own accord, have already entered upon with such decision. Even if loyal duty don't prompt it, interest will. For Slavery, after having been crippled as it has by the war, even if it could live, would only be an incumbrance. But it can't live. It is already half dead. Let the loyal men of the South finish it and bury it in their own way.

Gen. Grant's Railroad Communications.

In that particular district where operations are now being conducted, Gen. Grant has no permanent line of water communication. He may use portions of the Tennessee and Cumberland Rivers during a portion of the year. But he cannot get steamers over the Muscle Shoals at any time, and over Harpeth Shoals in the Cumberland, only during very high water. At all other times he must depend on the railroad line to Louisville, now stretching from his front to his real base of operations, the weary distance of three hundred and fifty miles.

But though the railroad is as good one season as another, yet it is, at the best, a very precarious dependence. Aside from its liability to interruption, there are difficulties quite as serious. The road from Nashville to Chattanooga, over which most of the supplies now pass, is one of the poorest roads in the whole South. A single, unballasted track, deficient turn-outs, miserable rolling stock, and very heavy grades, are its distinguishing features. When we first began to operate it, a large portion was laid with the old-fashioned strap-rail. This has been removed, and heavier rail put down. The grades, however, are the chief difficulty. The road crosses the Cumberland Mountain between Cowan and Tantalon, ninety miles south of Nashville, at a grade of one hundred and six feet to the mile. Three engines, such as have been used there, are necessary to haul a loaded train over this portion of the road. It has been a literal struggle to keep the army supplied over this road.

But a new era is dawning in regard to railroad transportation in this Department. Many of the difficulties will be overcome, and the distance materially shortened. The Memphis and Charleston Railroad is to be—probably is by this time—opened from Stevenson to Decatur, or a point opposite. The Tennessee and Alabama Railroad, which has lately only been operated from Nashville to Columbia, Tenn., is to be opened its entire length to Athens, Ala., at or near which place it forms a junction with the Memphis and Charleston Railroad. Although this is a longer route to Nashville, yet the road is so much better, and the grades so much easier, that one-third more business can be done over it than over the Nashville and Chattanooga Railroad, and by opening it we get the advantage of two routes of transportation. Its flank is protected by the Tennessee, and the road is fully as safe as the other.

Between Nashville and the Ohio River, another improvement is taking place. The distance between Nashville and Louisville is one hundred and eighty-five miles, and the road traverses a section of country fully as liable to guerrilla incursions as that further south. By February next a railroad will be in operation from Nashville to the Tennessee, tapping that river about sixty miles from its mouth, at a point where there is never less than four feet of water. This road is seventy-four miles long, and is known as the Northwestern railroad. It was projected years ago, and partly built, we believe, but owing to the powerful influence of the Louisville and Nashville road, it was never completed. But the Government ignores personal interests and prejudices, and is now energetically pushing this road forward to completion. After the war is over, the people of that section will have cause to bless the Government for its energy. This line shortens the railroad communication between the front and the water base by the sum of one hundred and eleven miles.

Six new and powerful engines have just been added to the rolling stock of the Nashville and Chattanooga road, and its management has latterly been much improved. By these two avenues, therefore, the Army of the Cumberland, even with its present large force, ought to keep tolerably well supplied.

The New and "Complete Victory" of Gen. Grant.

When Maj.-Gen. Grant officially announces, as he does under date of Wednesday night, that his army has achieved a "complete victory over Bragg," the country will give to the statement such full degree of faith as has always been commanded by the dispatches of that officer. For Gen. Grant's modesty is as great as his genius; and in estimating the extent and scope of his former victories, he has never erred in attributing to them a magnitude not justified subsequently, but has been inclined rather to underestimate their value. It seems that the battle which Heaven crowned with this victory was far greater than appeared in the dispatches of yesterday; for Gen. Grant says that on Wednesday the "battle lasted from early dawn till dark in the evening," and the large captures of artillery, small arms and prisoners, furnish proof that our gallant troops did their work well. It was no mere strategic success that Gen. Grant gained, though no one could have read the dispatches of yesterday without seeing in the strategy the hand of a consummate master of scientific war; but beside this there was the heroic struggle front to front; and it was this combination of courage and skill that gave us the victory.

Gen. Thomas, in his official dispatch, under date of Wednesday midnight, elegantly says, "We will pursue the enemy in the morning." This was after the two days' of hard fighting which his army had undergone, and indicates that the men were still strong and vigorous. With this dispatch of Gen. Thomas, our official intelligence closes, but through the press dispatches, we are told that Bragg's army was yesterday chased across Chickamauga Creek, and that Gen. Hooker had pursued them as far as Ringgold, some fifteen miles from Chattanooga. The dispatches represent the rebel army as flying in utter confusion, after a style compared with which the first Bull Run was an orderly and handsome "change of base."

We hope that these latter dispatches will all be confirmed by the report of Maj.-Gen. Grant.

If Longstreet is still in East Tennessee, as we suppose he must be, his position must be looked upon as extremely precarious; for Ringgold, which our advance was reported to have reached last evening, is but one day's march from the line of the Western and Atlantic Railroad, by which Longstreet's retreat from Knoxville would naturally be conducted. He will either by some means or other have to dodge Grant, or fight him, or be "bagged" by him.

Amid battle and blood did the ever victorious army of Gen. Grant spend the two days preceding Thanksgiving Day, and in hot pursuit of the armed hosts of this infernal rebellion did they "keep" the National holiday itself. Surely it was meet that the whole country yesterday expressed its gratitude to Heaven.

Mr. Corning and the New-York Central Railroad.

Into whatever department of the Central we look, we always find the grasping hand of Mr. Corning ever busy in promoting his own advantage. Everything has to bend to his insatiable avarice. He is the pivotal point around which the road, with all its ramifications, revolves. He will not brook the least restraint upon his will or his schemes. A notable instance of this occurred some years ago. For some time after the consolidation, the utmost looseness prevailed in the manner in which supplies for the road were furnished. Each official ordered whatever he pleased, and his order was deemed sufficient evidence, without any other proof, that the articles were needed for, and were used on the road. The accounts then received the initials of Mr. Vibbard or Mr. Corning, and were handed over by bushels to the committee on accounts to be passed by them. The committee saw the impropriety and wrong of all this, but what could they do? It happened, luckily, that Mr. Corning made a visit to Europe, and during his absence they had sufficient influence with the Board to get a system adopted that effectually protected the Company. Every person using or disbursing supplies was required to return regular and frequent statements of the amount of materials or supplies on hand, and the amount required in his Department, so that it could be seen at a glance whether his requisition was a proper one, and whether the articles furnished had been judiciously expended. A purchasing agent was also appointed. All these reforms stared Mr. Corning in the face when he came home. He was excessively angry, complained to the Committee that he had been grossly insulted by their interference, and set himself about to neutralize, as far as possible, their action. How far the checks that were adopted to prevent fraud or wastefulness in the ordering or use of supplies, have been abrogated, we cannot tell; but the purchasing agency was either discontinued, or it is now little, if anything, more than a go-between between Mr. Corning and the Company. The Committee did their best to vindicate their conduct in the matter, but nothing could appease Mr. Corning's wounded pride or his resentment at the interference with his prerogatives, and it was not long before some of the Committee, most resolute for reform, were left out of the Board.

Previous to the consolidation, Mr. Corning's supply agency was limited to the Utica and Schenectady Railroad, of which he was President—a short line of seventy-eight miles. Upon the consolidation he grasped the whole. He was then the chief owner of large iron establishments, the capacity of which he immediately increased so as to meet the demands of the new Company. It is well known that iron, in the various forms of its manufacture, such as rails, chains, spikes, axles, &c., &c., is the great article of expense in running a road. Up to the establishment of his autocracy, other manufacturers competed with him, and by the better terms they offered, supplied by far the greater portion of the articles used by the separate companies. Subsequent to the date named, they, or the greater portion of his competitors, have been either partially or wholely excluded. One concern, particularly, whose works are equally eligibly situated as Mr. Corning's, and which had nearly the whole field before the companies were united, has not since been able to get an order to the amount of a single penny, although it would be glad to pay the Company $150,000 annually, for the privilege of supplying to it the articles of iron alone, which Mr. Corning's concern manufactures and supplies. But no competition, in anything that Mr. Corning can furnish, is allowed to invade his sacred prerogative of spoils.

In connection with this matter of supplying manufactures of iron, is an incident which most strikingly illustrates the total absorption in Mr. Corning, of the road and all its interests. His concern pirated from a distinguished inventor the art of making spikes of the peculiar pattern used on railroads, the Supreme Court of the United States sustained the title of the inventor, and ordered the appointment of a referee to report the damages sustained by the invasion of the patent. A distinguished Ex-Chancellor was appointed to this duty. It was the simplest one possible, as the books of the trespassers showed the whole extent of the invasion. Soon after his appointment, the referee was taken into the employment of the Central Company. How far this subsequent appointment by the Central influenced the action of the referee we do not pretend to state; but it is notorious that in spite of the utmost urging of the inventor, ten long years have elapsed since the appointment, and no report has been yet made in a matter for which one month would have been ample. With this case, which has already become a great public scandal, from the manner in which justice has been defeated and delayed, and which will rank with the most "celebrated cases" ever before any tribunal, we have nothing to do, and only refer to it for the significant inferences that can be drawn from it, as to the extent to which the Central Company is wielded by Mr. Corning.

We might go on ad infinitum, in multiplying cases of the kind instanced. There was the great wood scandal—a fraud by which, a few years ago, the Company was swindled out of nearly $1,000,000. The cost of wood used in 1856 was $768,583; in 1857, $847,583; The total number of miles run in 1856 was 3,296,533; in 1857, 3,647,321. The cost per mile the former year was 23.315 cents; for the latter 23.246. The cost of wood for 1862 was $722,734. The number of miles run was 5,881,141; the cost per mile was 13.432 cents per mile; at the cost per mile for 1862, and for the average of years excepting 1856 and 1857, the loss on wood for the two years was, $615,000 19. Wood, in 1862, was at least 33 per cent. dearer than in 1856-7. About all we can say in reference to this matter is, that the Company was enormously swindled; that the few facts that could be elicited, (everything being suppressed that could be,) left no reasonable doubt that parties occupying very high positions in the Company were interested in the frauds. Such parties still retain their places. No one was ever punished. The only sufferer was a certain poor fellow, who brought some of the swindles to light, and who was, for his pains, soon dismissed from the service of the Company.

Ham in Uniform.—The first regiment of negro soldiers that has appeared in this City, was encamped yesterday in front of the City Hall. The regiment was from Washington, and the negroes were mostly of the Maryland stock. The fighting capacity of the men really appeared to be excellent. In stature, they were smaller than the average of white regiments; in complexion, they were generally quite dark. In style, they did not quite equal some of our fancy holiday regiments; but for hard, serviceable work in the trenches, on the march or in the field, they seemed to have spirit and intelligence, as well as muscle. Many thousands of people visited the place where they were encamped during the day, and instead of jeers or violence toward the black doula of their country, there were almost universal expressions of admiration and applause.

Captured Cannon.—Gen. Grant has made another splendid haul of artillery from the rebels. He captured on Wednesday fifty-two cannon—the largest number, if we remember aright, taken from the rebels in any field action of the war. On Grant's magnificent march up to Vicksburgh, before he invested that place, he captured sixty pieces of field artillery—thirty-six of them being taken at the action on the Big Black; and when Vicksburgh surrendered over 300 cannon fell into his hands. Grant's losses in guns, throughout his career, have been trivial.

Skirmishing with the Rebel Rear Guard all Yesterday

A BATTLE TO-DAY QUITE PROBABLE.

ESTIMATE OF THE REBEL STRENGTH.

JEFF. DAVIS REVIEWING HIS TROOPS.

SPECIAL DISPATCH TO THE N. Y. TIMES

E. A. Paul sends this.

Army of the Potomac, Thursday, Nov. 26.

During the last two days the roads have dried up almost miraculously and traveling is comparatively good.

The Army of the Potomac is again on the march.

By this time it is probably in front of the rebel works on the Rapidan.

Skirmishing with Lee's rear guard is going on all this day. A battle to-morrow is considered imminent. The army is in splendid condition. It only needs to be led to victory.

A man came into our lines yesterday who has within a few weeks traversed nearly the whole extent of the so-called Confederate States. Recently he was in prison as a spy, but managed to escape. He confirms all that has been reported as to the scarcity of provisions and general discontent at the existing state of affairs everywhere.

Lee is represented to be near Orange Court-house with what army he has near at hand. He estimates Lee's forces as follows: Forty-two thousand infantry, eight thousand cavalry and one hundred and forty-five pieces of artillery.

Lee, accompanied by Jeff. Davis, reviewed a portion of the army on Tuesday and the remainder yesterday. On the latter day our pickets heard the enemy cheering, and the review is supposed to have been going on then.

Washington, Thursday, Nov. 26.

A gentleman who reached this city to-night from the Army of the Potomac, says that Jeff. Davis reviewed Gen. Lee's troops yesterday.

The roads are now in tolerably good traveling condition.

The news from Chattanooga was telegraphed from Washington to the Headquarters of the Army of the Potomac. It soon became known to the soldiers, who received it throughout our now moving lines with the wildest delight and cheers.

They are all enthusiastic to follow the brilliant example of their compatriots, and will very soon have that opportunity.

OUR SPECIAL ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

The Army Completely Mud-Bound—The Chance for a Fall Campaign Gone—A False Alarm in Camp—Sympathy for Gen. Fitzpatrick.

Army of the Potomac, Wednesday, Nov. 25, 1863.

The people at home ere this, doubtless, expected to hear of something having been done by this army toward forcing the enemy in our front into another pitched battle, and are disappointed. But that is not the worst of it. I fear there is too much ground to say that they will be disappointed for some time to come; that it is now "too late" for active operations. Several weeks of fine Autumn weather were frittered away, for what purpose is not to the subscriber quite apparent. There are those who profess to believe that the army is no better prepared for a movement now than it was two weeks ago last Sunday, when the Rappahannock was crossed. Not knowing the alleged or real causes—if there are any—of the delay, or but little of the interior management of affairs, I am not prepared to indorse the statement; but I can say, in truth, that there is apparently much foundation for it. To-day the army is as completely mud-bound as it was almost any time last Winter or Spring. The fact that a four hours' rain-storm has done all this, will give the reader a better idea of the soil of Virginia in this vicinity than Professor Anybody could give in an evening lecture. It is true, however, that the soil drys quickly when the sun shines, but this affords the anxious ones little hope in face of the statements made by old residents here, (Union men,) that seldom is there seen here, between November 30 and March, anything like what may be called settled weather. That is, the Heavens yield just enough of the surplus aqueous element to keep the roads in a horrible condition. And the fields, owing to the character of the soil, are no better. These matters are reluctantly referred to, because I know it will make sad many a loyal heart; but then the truth should be told sometimes plainly, and this is one of those times. It will disarm many grumblers, if no other good is accomplished by it.

When everybody in camp is expecting to hear any moment hostile batteries opened upon each at no great distance away, some amusing scenes occur. A horse giving himself a good shake at night produces a noise not unlike distant cannonading, and under the circumstances supposed, many persons have started to their feet upon hearing the sound. Night before last a whole division was aroused by what every one supposed to be the firing of guns on the Rapidan. Officers and men prepared for action; reporters mounted their nags, and several actually started off to find the scene of conflict, at midnight. The night was an exceedingly disagreeable one, and one individual, more incredulous than some, and not over anxious to move out of his comparatively comfortable quarters during the storm, investigated the character of the sound more closely than others, and found, much to his relief, that it proceeded from a well close at hand, where a stalwart Hibernian was endeavoring to fill a bucket with water sailor fashion, by dropping it bottom up into the water, the concussion producing a noise which every person had heard many times without thinking how much it resembled the explosion of a cannon.

Two more deserters are to be branded under sentence of a Court-martial, when the proceedings of the Court shall have been approved.

The following quotations are from the orders:

Stevensburgh, Va., Headquarters Third Division, Cavalry Corps, Nov. 24, 1863.

As it has pleased Almighty God, the Disposer and Giver of all good, to remove from the side of our respected General his beloved consort:

Resolved, That we, the members of his Staff, do offer our heartfelt sympathies and condolence in this, his severe affliction, and that although nothing can fill the aching void left by the departure of his dear wife, he yet may know by this expression of our sorrow in his bereavement, that he has still true and loving hearts by his side, ready to share his sorrows or his joys.

Chloasma, or Moth Patches.

Blemishes on the face, called Moth, are very annoying, particularly to ladies of light complexion, as the discolored spots on the skin show more strongly on blondes than on brunettes, but they contribute greatly in marring the beauty on either, and anything that will remove Moth Patches without injuring the skin in texture or color, would no doubt be considered a great achievement in medical science. Dr. B. C. PERRY, having devoted his whole time and attention to Diseases of the Skin, will guarantee to remove Moth Patches, Freckles, and other discolorations from the face without injury to either texture or color of the skin. His success in this, as in other branches of his specialty—DISEASES OF THE SCALP AND ROOTS OF HAIR—will warrant him in guaranteeing a CURE IN EVERY CASE. AGAIN NEW TESTIMONY.

READ.

HARLEM, July 30, 1863.

I have been deaf for over TWENTY-FIVE YEARS, and Dr. VON EISENBERG operated on both of my ears without the slightest pain—a thing that I could not believe could be done. I now hear well, and feel as I never felt for the last twenty years. The dexterity and skill with which the operation was performed evince the highest practical ability. I hear perfectly. It is now over a month since the operation, and I continue to feel as well as ever.

CATARRH CURED.

NEW-YORK, Aug. 23, 1863.

I have been suffering for the last three years from a severe Catarrh, with a continual dullness in my head, a tightness across my chest, a weight over my eyes, which were weak, watery and very painful. My nostrils were continually obstructed with a pouring of fluid. I have had frequent sneezing, hoarseness of my voice, generally attended with spitting, often with a fullness of my throat, together with a soreness and a dropping. Dr. VON EISENBERG has cured me of all these disagreeable sufferings. I now feel a new life. The treatment of Dr. VON EISENBERG is so skillful as it is successful; it is impossible to overrate the benefit I have received at his hands. I heartily recommend any one suffering like myself to place themselves under Dr. VON EISENBERG's care, with a certainty of being speedily cured. I give this with gratitude and pleasure. I cannot forbear again saying that my voice, which was hoarse and thick when I applied to Dr. VON EISENBERG, is now clear and good; indeed, I feel abundantly satisfied.

JAMES LITTLE,
No. 245 7th-st., New-York.

NEW-YORK, Sept. 9.

I have been suffering for years past from a severe Catarrh, with a great heaviness over my eyes, with a severe depression, great uneasiness, and pain in my head, great difficulty in breathing, and a continual accumulation in my nostrils, which gave me restless nights for several years. I have consulted several physicians, who pronounced me to be consumptive. What I suffered for so long a time is indescribable. My system was entirely disarranged and greatly debilitated. I not only felt weak, but I had a cloud continually before my eyes, and my ears were so affected that I was threatened with a total loss of hearing. I must say, I think I was guided by Providence to come to Dr. Von Eisenberg, who not only cured me of my Catarrh by removing an astonishing quantity of disagreeable matter from my head, but he restored me to perfect health, a blessing I have not enjoyed for many years. Now I enjoy a good night's rest, and pursue my business with comfort. I must acknowledge that Dr. Von Eisenberg's mild and scientific treatment for Catarrh deserves the highest commendation, as the principle which directs his system of curing Catarrh is such as to render success certain.

JAMES FURLONG, No. 359 2d-av.

No. 134 ALLEN-ST., NEW-YORK, Feb. 9, 1863.

I have been completely deaf in one ear, and partially so in the other, for above seventeen years, with a disagreeable discharge from both ears, combined with continual rumbling noise in the head, for which I have been treated by a most eminent practitioner in the City without the slightest relief.

I consulted Dr. Von Eisenberg, but I must candidly say that I had no faith in his success when I did so. It is, therefore, due to Dr. Von Eisenberg to acknowledge that I am entirely cured; also, that he displayed that skill and knowledge which have procured for him such an unrivaled reputation. As I have had an opportunity of comparing his mode of treatment with that of others, I can truly state that it is not only superior, but the principles which direct his mode of restoring the hearing are, in my opinion, certain.

JOHN TAYLOR,

NEW-YORK, July 19, 1862.

This certifies that my mother has been for some time afflicted with partial deafness, suffering from pain, and rumbling noises in the head, together with other indications of a total loss of hearing. Dr. Von Eisenberg removed from her ears a great quantity of matter, together with coagulated blood, relieving her instantaneously, and all without pain. It is with grateful thanks that I give this testimony to his skill.

CARROLL J. POST, No. 28 South-st.

SIGHT RESTORED.

JUNE 25, 1863.

My daughter brought me to Dr. VON EISENBERG almost completely blind in both eyes. I could not hear the pain nor the light. I am completely cured by Dr. VON EISENBERG, and called now to express my gratitude to the Doctor for his skill and unremitting attention, by which I recovered one of the most precious senses to me after being deprived of it for four years. It is only due to Dr. VON EISENBERG to state that I have tried several physicians in vain. I shall be happy to bear personal testimony to Dr. VON EISENBERG's unrivaled success to any lady or gentleman who will call on me.

CHRONIC CATARRH CURED.

READ.

NEW-YORK, March 20, 1863.

"This is to certify, that I have suffered from very severe CHRONIC CATARRH, with a dull heaviness in the head. I felt my nose completely stopped up accompanied by continual soreness of the throat, the chills stealing over me with occasional hot flushes, a great tightness of the chest and pain, so much so, that every one thought it was consumption. Having heard of the great cures performed by Dr. Von Eisenberg, I consulted him with but little hope of a cure. I am now happy to be enabled to add my testimonial to the great number already in the Doctor's possession, as to his scientific and successful mode of treatment, as he has shown in my case that skill and knowledge which have procured for him so great a reputation. I am so entirely restored to perfect health that I do most sincerely recommend all sufferers from CHRONIC CATARRH and SORE THROAT to apply at once to Dr. Von Eisenberg with a certainty of being cured."

NEW-YORK CENTRAL RAILROAD.

The undersigned stockholders in the New-York Central Railroad, feeling deeply interested in a reform of the management of said Road, respectfully recommend all holders of stock who cannot be themselves present at the ensuing election of Directors, to send their proxies to Thomas W. Olcott, Albany, John E. Williams and George F. Tallman, of New-York, or either of them, to be voted upon by them at that election.

At some time previous to that day a meeting will be called of all the stockholders who may thus send them their proxies, for the nomination of a Board of Directors, or whom their votes will be cast.

The undersigned respectfully suggest that the interest of stockholders will be better secured by thus placing their proxies in the hands of disinterested and well known gentlemen, such as those named above, than by submitting them to the present officers of the Road, to be used in securing their own reelection.

A WORD TO CLERGYMEN.

The high character, scholastic attainments, erudition and social qualifications of American Clergymen, are in strong contrast with the narrow prejudices and limited resources which have marked the history of other nations, and of earlier periods of the world. Coming directly in contact with the theories of the most enlightened minds, as well as the customs of common life, they are better calculated to judge of popular opinion and current ideas, than any other class of men. Their influence is unbounded. Their opportunities for directing practical reforms and progressive developments impose many obligations. In acknowledgment of the many complimentary indorsements and favors which DR. DRAKE has received from Clergymen in behalf of his PLANTATION BITTERS, he has directed his Agents, Messrs. BARNES & CO., No. 203 Broadway, N. Y., to present a bottle gratis, to every Clergyman who may personally call during the remainder of this year, 1863.

Quite to his surprise, he has ascertained that many persons, sharing in a natural prejudice against supposed nostrums, have classed this with other useless articles, and are yet entirely ignorant of its pure character and wonderful effects.

Dr. DRAKE seeks no confidence not founded upon evidences of skill and fair, open dealing; relying upon the intelligence of the people, he makes a medicine of the celebrated Calisaya Bark, Dandelion, Cascarilla Bark, Camomile Flowers, Lavender Flowers, Anise, Clove Buds, Orange Peel, Carraway, Chinnamilla, Snake Root, &c., &c., preserved in pure St. Croix Rum—and tells them so. Physicians have to indorse him.

With this recipe before the community, and evidences of effects meeting them on all sides, the success of Dr. DRAKE stands founded upon the rock of truth. Every Parish—almost every family—has some case of suffering which the PLANTATION BITTERS will alleviate and cure. Their effects in cases of lassitude, enervation, loss of appetite, constipation, sour stomach, fœtid breath, pain after eating, headache, dyspepsia, liver complaint, general debility, &c., are most remarkable. For aged persons and delicate females they are worth their price in gold.

Let every Clergyman improve this opportunity, and armed with a bottle of PLANTATION BITTERS, dispense healing without money and without price.

UNION NOMINATION.

FOR MAYOR.

ORISON BLUNT.

ORISON BLUNT has been a successful merchant in this City for twenty-five years.

He was elected Alderman of the Third Ward, at the General Election in 1853, and served during the year 1854.

He soon became distinguished for his uncompromising opposition to "high priced" contracts and swindles on the City Government.

By his determined opposition to the Russ Pavement Contract, in which seven dollars and fifty cents per square yard was charged for stone, it was finally surrendered.

Mr. BLUNT then took an active part in bringing into use the Belgian or Trap-Block Pavement, at one dollar and ninety cents per square yard, which met with universal favor, and which has been laid in many of the principal streets of this City.

He also strongly opposed the Offal Contract, which had been made in 1853, which contract, through Mr. BLUNT'S opposition, was finally surrendered and compromised satisfactorily to all parties, with a great saving to the City.

After that, another contract was made for the removal of the offal, which yielded a handsome revenue to the City.

During his term of service as an Alderman, Mr. BLUNT also introduced the question of using Steam Fire Engines in the Fire Department, and which he strenuously advocated.

He was appointed to examine and report the best plan or model of Steam Fire Engines, when prizes therefor were offered by the Common Council, and his report was unanimously accepted.

Steam Fire Engines which then met with so much opposition are now universally approved by the Fire Department throughout the country.

Mr. BLUNT also recommended the lighting of Piers by means of Reflectors, which plan was adopted, and has saved many valuable lives.

When the question of bringing a greater supply of Croton Water over High Bridge was agitated, Mr. BLUNT was the first to recommend the use of wrought iron pipes for the purpose, until a permanent structure could be finished.

At the Election in 1856 he was again elected Alderman, and represented the Fifteenth Ward, where he then lived, in 1857.

Here, again, he was conspicuous in his persistent and determined opposition to all jobs and fat contracts, and succeeded in stopping many of them.

He successfully opposed the sale of the Lower Market property, and the scheme was abandoned for that year.

When the Police law was changed, he battled again t FERNANDO WOOD'S friends, and sustained the Metropolitan Police Commissioners.

The entire force subsequently serenaded him at his residence. Mr. BLUNT has always sustained the force by his votes and speeches, and when the appropriation for their salaries was exhausted, he urged upon A. V. STOUT, Esq., then Chamberlain, to advance the money, notwithstanding the deficiency, and pledged himself to vote for the appropriation in the Board of Supervisors.

When the Board of Supervisors was reorganized under the Act of 1857, he was elected to that Board, and has been distinguished as a Supervisor for his zeal in protecting the best interests of the County.

When the new Board of Supervisors entered upon their duties in 1858, they found many thousands of dollars of arrearages for supplies furnished the County in previous years.

Most of these bills were examined by Mr. BLUNT, and by careful auditing on his part, the amounts were reduced in some instances more than one-half, and a great reduction made in the gross amount.

Since then, the expenditures have been kept within the amounts appropriated and raised for the year, with a balance to the credit of the County to begin the new year.

Mr. BLUNT, by his own personal efforts in exposing fraudulent measures, has prevented many of them being passed.

His opposition to the contract made by the Commissioners of Records, under which eight hundred thousand dollars of the public money has been expended, has been most determined, and he succeeded in defeating some of the appropriations proposed to be made for them.

When the rebellion commenced in earnest, and the President called for troops to defend the Capital, Mr. BLUNT devoted more time and spent more money in sending troops to the seat of war than any other private or public citizen in this City.

He was engaged night and day in equipping the regiments, providing transportation, &c., and without receiving one dollar of compensation from the Government.

Before the draft was made in this City, Mr. BLUNT recommended the appropriation of two millions of dollars to procure Volunteers, and thus avoid the necessity of a draft; but he was not able at that time to secure the appropriation.

After the draft was made, and while the Common Council, who had voted three millions of dollars to exempt substitutes, could not agree as to the manner of spending the money, the Board of Supervisors, with the Mayor and Comptroller, adopted a plan by which two millions of dollars was appropriated for the purpose.

Supervisor BLUNT was selected by the Committee to carry out the provisions of the ordinance thus adopted, to procure substitutes for drafted men.

By the manner in which Mr. BLUNT managed the operations, the Firemen, Militia, Policemen and poor men, who were unable to pay the three hundred dollars exemption, were provided with substitutes, and the total cost did not reach six hundred thousand dollars. Thus, the Government got the men, and the Police, the Firemen, the Militia and others were relieved from the necessity of paying the three hundred dollars or going into the army.

So methodical and business-like were his arrangements in this expenditure of six hundred thousand dollars, that when he closed up the work, the cash balanced to a cent. Vouchers for every expenditure were filed with the Comptroller, and a balance remained of nearly one and a half millions of dollars.

When the new call for troops was made by the President, Mr. BLUNT was satisfied that, with proper bounties, a sufficient number of Volunteers could be procured to furnish the quota of the City and County of New-York, and, on his recommendation, two millions of dollars have been appropriated to procure the Volunteers.

Mr. BLUNT is a hard working man, in whatever he undertakes. Quick to discover a fraud, he is never cheated. Liberal with his own money, he is scrupulously careful of that belonging to the public.

He would make an active, energetic Mayor.

Having risen from the ranks, he is one of the people, and knows how to take care of their interests.

He does not steal himself, nor will he let anyone else, if he can help it.

NOTICE.

To the Stockholders of the New-York and Harlem Railroad Company.

The increasing business of the Company and anticipated connections with other Railroads render it expedient forthwith to extend the double track from its present terminus at Williams Bridge to Chatham Four Corners, and to complete the road from that place through to Albany.

For the purpose of meeting the necessary outlays attending such constructions, and to defray the expenses incident to the extensions of the City Railroad already authorized, the Board of Directors have resolved that it is expedient to increase the Capital Stock to such amount, not exceeding the limitation of the Charters, as may be sanctioned by the Stockholders, and to issue the increased stock from time to time as may be required for the purposes of completing such double track and extensions and procuring the necessary additional rolling stock.

The amount of the Capital Stock, as limited by the charter and amendatory acts, and including both the common and Preferred Stock, is eight millions of dollars, of which two millions one hundred and thirty-nine thousand nine hundred and fifty dollars remained unissued.

The Board of Directors propose that the Capital Stock be increased to its full amount.

A meeting of the Stockholders for the purpose of acting upon such proposition of the Board of Directors and of concurring in the increase of the Capital Stock to the full amount, authorized by the Charter and the several acts of the Legislature amendatory thereof, will be held at the Office of the Company, at the corner of 26th-st. and 4th-av., on TUESDAY, the first day of December next, at 12 o'clock noon of that day.

For the purpose of ascertaining the Stockholders who shall be entitled to vote at such meeting, the Books of Transfer will be closed, as required by law, on Saturday, the 7th day of November inst., the day on the first publication of this notice.

The Books will be open on Tuesday, the 10th day of November inst.

Dated, New-York, Nov. 6, 1863.
By order of the Board of Directors,
C. VANDERBILT, President.
WM. H. EMERSON, Secretary.

PRIVATE DISEASES CURED IN THE shortest possible time, by Dr. WARD & CO., No. 50 Lispenard-st., near Broadway, without the use of Mercury, loss of time or change of diet. Dr. WARD, from the hospitals of London, Paris and Edinburgh, is the discoverer of the only certain and reliable remedies for diseases of a private character. In 25 years' practice he has cured more cases of Secret Diseases and Wrong Treatment than all others combined. I can and will cure you in less time and expense than any one can or will, and those who have been robbed of their money and health, call: it will take but little money and time to restore you. If you have been unfortunate, call at once. By his special experience in this much neglected branch of medical science, he is enabled to guarantee a cure in the most complicated cases. Recent cases of Gonorrhœa or Syphilis cured in a few days, without change of diet or hindrance from business. Secondary Syphilis—the last vestige eradicated without the use of Mercury. Involuntary emissions stopped in a short time. Sufferers from Impotency, or loss of sexual power, restored to full vigor in a few weeks. Permanently and speedily cured by a new treatment. Persons at a distance failing to receive prompt treatment elsewhere, may get a permanent cure effected by writing a full diagnosis of their case, addressed to Dr. WARD, No 50 Lispenard-st., the only place. GRAND OPERA IN FIVE ACTS BY GOUNOD.
Act I.—Faust and Mephistophiles—The Compact.
Act II.—The Kermesse.
Act III.—The Garden.
Act IV.—Repentance.
Act V.—Death.

The reception accorded this work when presented for the first time at the Academy of Music on Wednesday evening was alike flattering to the composer and gratifying to the Director. The unqualified success then achieved has unusual significance, since no attempt had been made beforehand to predispose the public in favor of "Faust." There was no effort made to create a success d'estime by the employment of claqueurs, as is too frequently done, even in the principal opera-houses of Europe upon occasions of such importance to the management and artists. Decision as to the merits of the music was left entirely to the very large and intelligent audience present, and a sufficient proof of the unbiased nature of the verdict obtained is had in the fact that the performance was listened to with breathless attention, and that the increased satisfaction was manifested at the close of each act, culminating in a burst of spontaneous enthusiasm indicative of the great pleasure derived from the entire opera. When it is remembered that "Faust" is a work exceedingly original in treatment, in fact a decided innovation upon the standard method of lyric composition that hardly a note of the score had been given in in this country, that the melodic forms used are perfectly novel in character, and that the composer has sedulously avoided the introduction of a cretyped musical climaxes for the purpose of creating momentary sensations, it is highly creditable to the taste and judgment of the New-York public that it has pronounced so unanimously in favor of this opera after a single hearing.

CENTRAL AMERICA.

The War Between Guatemala and Salvador Ended—Flight of President Barrios—Attack on an American Captain.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PANAMA, Tuesday, Nov. 17, 1863.

The Panama Railroad Company's steamship Salvador arrived from Central American ports on Sunday. She brings dates from Guatemala to the 9th, Salvador to the 10th, Nicaragua to the 12th, and Costa Rica to the 14th. She has but little freight for New-York, viz.: 1,570 hides, 40 bales deerskins, 17 seroons cochineal, 2 bags coffee, 2 bales cotton, 2 cases mats, 9 cans balsam, 1 box silver, 1 parcel gold.

The war in Salvador is at an end. On the 26th of October, at 3 o'clock in the morning, Gen. BARRIOS, at the head of only 500 men, (not 1,500, as is reported,) marched out of the City of San Salvador, in which he had been so long besieged by President CARRERA, and took the road toward San Miguel, the most populous city of the Republic, and where, principally on account of the bad conduct of the Nicaraguans, who have for some time garrisoned it in behalf of Guatemala, he has many friends. CARRERA discovered his retreat at 7 o'clock same morning, and followed him up immediately. Previous to his departure, BARRIOS levied for money and rations on the inhabitants, and before the Guatemalans entered, the city was pillaged to some extent by the bad portion of the people. Several officers of BARRIOS were taken prisoners in the city. VRUNGARY, OYAZUN, ARELAR and LUNA were taken prisoners in the pursuit, and shot. The first named was Minister of Foreign Relations of Salvador. Several combats took place between the advanced guard of CARRERA and the fleeing troops of BARRIOS, both sides losing a few men. The force of BARRIOS, on its retreat, was either killed, taken prisoners, or dispersed, and he made his way finally to the coast, in the neighborhood of the port of La Union, in company with seven officers, who were seen there a day or two before the sailing of the steamer, and are still at large, endeavoring to escape.

A new Government, under a former President, DUENAS, was at once organized in San Salvador, and measures taken to protect property.

When the Panama Railroad Company's steamer Salvador arrived at La Union on the night of the 3d inst., it was known that the wife of President BARRIOS was on board, and the port-officers chose to believe she came for the purpose of assisting him to escape. So, Commandante CASTRO immediately commenced a most vexatious interference with the business of the steamer, although he had previously promised she should not be troubled. He even refused to allow the clothes that had been washed on shore to come on board; and finally sent a little schooner within 200 yards of the steamer, under pretence of watching her more closely. Mr. PARTRIDGE, United States Minister, had arranged with the commander of Her Britannic Majesty's ship Bacchante, to protect American property in case of need, as it was known to him that the authorities had threatened to seize BARRIOS in case he sought refuge on board the steamer.

About 7½ o'clock in the evening, Capt. BOWDITCH, of the Salvador, while returning on board in his gig, having a United States ensign in the stern, and being perfectly well known to the people in the schooner, was fired upon by her from a rifle, the ball passing within three feet of his head. The indignation of the officers and crew of the Salvador, who witnessed this proceeding, was naturally great, and Capt. BOWDITCH of course sharing in it, the cannon on board, on his reaching his deck, was run out, and a shot from it whizzed over the heads of the ragamuffins on the schooner, that told them plainly what they had to expect, unless they should behave themselves more becomingly. On hearing the cannon-shot, some people from shore came out to the schooner, and were taking her away; but Capt. BOWDITCH forced all hands to come on board the Salvador, where he detained them till morning, and then sent them on shore.

The next morning Mr. PARTRIDGE called upon the Commandante, who was exceedingly insolent, and declared he would neither allow launch, nor boat, nor man, to go to or come from the steamer. Mr. PARTRIDGE replied that if the launches for discharging were not alongside the steamer in half an hour, and every impediment removed to the regular business of the vessel, he would at once call for assistance upon the English war-ship. In fifteen minutes the launches were ready, and every obstacle removed, and the steamer completed her business without further molestation. Mr. PARTRIDGE proceeded to the City of San Salvador and complained to Señor DUENAS, CARRERA's Acting President. President CARRERA said the Commandante ought to be removed, and sent another person temporarily to act in his place, so far as the Railroad Company's steamers are concerned.

Mr. PARTRIDGE fully justified Capt. BOWDITCH in firing upon the boat, as it had the effect of calling the insolent port-officers to their senses; and he is determined that no further petty obstacles shall be thrown in the way of American trade, especially as he has now the United States gunboat Saginaw, at La Union, to execute his orders.

BARRIOS' little war-schooner Experimento, on which he undoubtedly expected to escape from La Union, if defeated, was seen heading into Punta Arenas, Costa Rica, on the day the Panama steamer left there. It is thought probable that BARRIOS will escape on the British war-ship Bacchante. The Commander of the United States gunboat Saginaw is reported to have said that he had orders from Washington not to protect any fugitive Presidents or officers in this region.

There is no news of importance from Nicaragua. Mons. LOOS, the French agent, was still operating in the matter of the Nicaragua canal.

THE UNITED STATES OF COLOMBIA.

The War with Ecuador—Origin and Causes of the Trouble—Gen. Mosquera—Diplomatic Correspondence.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PANAMA, Tuesday, Nov. 17, 1863.

Late arrivals from Buenaventura, in our State of Cauca, and from Guayaquil, Ecuador, bring us official documents from both President MOSQUERA of this Republic and President MORENO of Ecuador, that render it almost certain that we are to have immediate war. And as this war is likely to extend itself among the Spanish-American States in these regions, and perhaps lead to French intervention, you will probably hear a great deal of it before it is finished. So it may not be amiss to post your readers up a little on the origin and causes of the trouble.

Some three years since Gen. MOSQUERA, probably the most accomplished soldier in Spanish-America, who was once President of this Republic, as was his father before him, was Governor of our neighboring State of Cauca. At that time a new Federal Constitution, under President OSPINA, had been promulgated, enlarging the powers of the States—in fact making them, as they claim to be, almost "sovereign." But President OSPINA, although he acceded to the exigencies of the moment, and approved by his signature the new Constitution, did not like it, and, it is charged, threw every obstacle in the way of its honest application. Gen. NIETO, Governor of the State of Bolivar, of which Carthagena is the capital, resisted by arms the "encroachments made upon the rights of the people," so far as his State was concerned, and was at once followed in this resistance by Gen. MOSQUERA, of the State of Cauca. MOSQUERA raised a force of a couple thousand men, (garrisoned some of the principal towns of Cauca, decreed a forced loan of $200,000 on the State, and declared it independent of the Republic until such time as President OSPINA and his Congress should abrogate the "obnoxious retrograde laws they had made, with the purpose of practically annulling the new Constitution and centralizing the power of the country at Bogota." But OSPINA was obstinate, and after a year or less of controversy between him and the Governors of States, and some fighting between small parties, MOSQUERA commenced his march over the bleak mountains and barren plains of the Cauca, toward Bogota. After eight or ten months, he finally arrived with 5,000 men before the capital city, having fought on the way several bloody battles. This march was one of the most extraordinary ones in military history, considering the means at the disposal of its chief. Without money, his men only half armed with old George LAW muskets—without shoes, and nearly naked—for days together with nothing but plantains and roots to subsist upon, climbing mountains scarcely accessible to goats, swimming swollen rivers, and opposed in many a Thermopolæ by the well-clad and well-armed troops of the Government, to reach Bogota, a thousand miles away, and finally to assault and take it, overthrow the Government and establish a new one on its ruins, were feats, as I have before said, that have no parallel in military records.

Well, Gen. MOSQUERA, who, with all his obstinacy and inclination to one man power, is an ardent Republican, and a hater of European monarchies and European interference in America, so soon as he had firmly established himself at Bogota, declared his intention of strengthening himself, if possible, by reconstructing the old Colombian Confederacy—consisting of New-Granada, Venezuela and Ecuador. As an initiatory step, he changed the name of this Republic from that of "New-Granada" to the "United States of Colombia." This, of itself, looked a little threatening toward our sister Republics. But he did not stop long at this. He sent agents at once to Venezuela and Ecuador, to propose terms for the reconstruction. The constant state of anarchy that has existed in Venezuela the past five years, has, up to the present, probably prevented much progress toward bringing that Republic into the scheme, and MOSQUERA's attention seems to have been principally turned toward Ecuador. And here, after a year and a half of negotiation, the matter has come to a dead lock—or, rather, Ecuador and New-Granada, not being able to agree upon uniting their fortunes in resistance to European encroachments, seem bent upon preparing their carcasses, by the weakening process of war, for the more easy digestion of the big buzzards that are hovering about their shores, in the shape of French and Spanish war ships.

President MOSQUERA, two or three months since left his capital for the frontier of Ecuador, to have an interview with President MORENO in regard to the proposed federation. President MORENA did not appear at the proposed conference, but sent Dr. FLORES, son of Gen. FLORES, as his representative. FLORES did not seem to be clothed with much power, and the interview terminated unsatisfactorily. In fact, the several notes that passed between Dr. FLORES and Señor QUIJANO, MOSQUERA's agent, evinced but little disposition on either side to arrange matters peaceably. The first note from Señor QUIJANO, the substance of which is given in the Star, of this city, is dated from Ipales, Oct. 13, and says that the Minister had orders from his Government to state to D. ANTONIO FLORES, that President MOSQUERA had come all the way from Rio Negro, in order to meet President GARCIA MORENO and reëstablish the "old and glorious nationality of Colombia," as a protection against theocratic and anti-republican machinations of European Powers and native traitors; that his invitation to do this was treated with insults by the Ecuadorian Government; that when Mr. FLORES was received in Pasto, it was understood that the interview between the two Presidents should take place within six days from 8th inst., and that there would be signed "at least a treaty of alliance or confederacy" projected in Pasto; that GARCIA MORENO had not yet made his appearance, without a plausible reason for the delay, and therefore the conference at Carchi and the signing of the treaty were frustrated; that consequently he (QUIJANO) had to notify ANTONIO FLORES and his Government, that the Government of Gen. MOSQUERA thought the moment had arrived for breaking off "the negotiations already commenced, and all relations with Ecuador," if the projected treaty were not signed in twenty-four hours from six o'clock in the afternoon of the 13th October.

Don ANTONIO FLORES answers in a somewhat lengthy but dignified note, dated Tulcan, Oct. 14. He states that there is no necessity for him to refute the first part of QUIJANO's document, as Ecuador, being united in the interior, and on good terms with the world, does not need any help; that no insulting treatment of MOSQUERA's propositions by the Government of Ecuador could have taken place, as these had not been made officially by special Plenipotentiaries as stipulated, and as the just protests of Ecuador, an independent State, were directed against the threatening manifest of Gen. MOSQUERA of Aug. 15. He denies further that any conditions were made to him at his reception in Pasto, and states that it would have been physically impossible for GARCIA MORENO to appear on the sixth day. Finally, he says that he and the Government of MOSQUERA had conferences about the signing of a treaty, but this was not the condition sine qua non of his reception, because in that case he would not have gone to Pasto; that Gen. MOSQUERA knew very well that he (FLORES) could not sign any treaty, having sent his resignation to Quito on Oct. 9, but that he might have taken upon him the responsibility of signing such treaty, if the demand were not made in an arrogant tone—that there was no reason for getting angry about the non-arrival of President GARCIA MORENO, as the latter had been detained by urgent business in Quito, and the less, as the same had waited for Gen. MOSQUERA more than a month some time ago, on the same frontier. He reserves for his Government the right to take the necessary steps in accordance to QUIJANO's note.

The next day ANTONIO FLORES got the official communication from the Granadian Government that the diplomatic intercourse had ceased, and at the same time the Granadian Minister in Quito was recalled. On the 21st of October the Government of Ecuador directed a note to the foreign Governments and their Ministers in Quito, and also a circular to their own diplomatic agents abroad, stating the course of the events and defending the course they have taken.

On the reception of this news at Quito, the Congress of Ecuador immediately passed a law authorizing President MORENO to declare war against Colombia, and troops were being concentrated at Quito for a march to the frontier, it is said with a view of crossing the Carchi, with 5,000 men under Gen. FLORES, to attack MOSQUERA, who had only 1,700 men, before he could be reinforced.

President MOSQUERA, on his part issued a Proclamation from Tuquerres, dated October 18, in which he sets forth at length, the causes of the rupture. He charges President MORENO with being vacillating. "Sometimes favorable to the cause of Colombian regeneration, and sometimes hostile to it"—says that MORENO's home policy has always been repressive and despotic—cites many acts to prove this, among which is the "iniquitous Concordat, that converts Ecuador into a colony of Rome, and which will be a fountain of evil, not only for Ecuador but for Colombia." He details at length the causes that led to the failure of the promised interview with President MORENO, charging the latter with an intention to deceive him in agreeing to it, and with having acted in a most insulting and contemptuous manner toward him since he has been waiting in Pasto for this interview. He charges President MORENO with harboring Jesuits and expatriated priests, and that he encouraged them and other refugees from New-Granada to endeavor to get up a revolution in Cauca, while he, MOSQUERA, was absent, with the bulk of the troops quartered there. Many other acts which Gen. MOSQUERA consider hostile to Colombia are recounted, and the proclamation concludes thus:

"Nothing is left for me but to lay before the approaching Congress all the documents comprised in this history of the outrages and insults of Ecuador toward Colombia, and which show the abnegation and generosity on my part to preserve peace between the two sister Republics.

"I have convened Congress in extraordinary session for the 1st of January, 1864, with the object to decide upon the proper course in this great political emergency. Its mandates will be fulfilled and will save the national honor, especially as guardian of the public liberties. I have ordered that the Colombian army shall be raised to 10,465 men and 1,100 officers, in conformity with the decree of 2d December, 1862, and which authorizes the discipline of the State militia, so that one per cent. of the population of each State can be called upon, to the number of 27,500 men, to be organized as a reserved force, &c.

Colombians! You know full well that the day of battle is the day of victory; wait quietly for the sound of the trumpet. An honorable peace or a secure victory. Upon one or the other I am resolved."

Panama's proportion of troops called out for the war on Ecuador is 1,000 men. Some small squads have already gone to Cauca.

We have but little other news from the interior. All the States have been heard from as regards the Presidential election. Dr. MURILLO, now Minister to Washington, has the votes of eight States, and Gen. MOSQUERA gets one—that of Cauca.

The Priest SAAVEDRA, who was ordered to be imprisoned in Cauca, was set at liberty by Gen. LOPEZ, Governor of Tolima, while on his way from Bogota to Gen. MOSQUERA's headquarters.

The U. S. sloop-of-war St. Marys has gone South. Her place here is supplied by the Cyane. H. B. Majesty's war-ship Charibdis is in port. In Aspinwall H. B. M.'s screw ship Barracouta is in port.

A gale of wind in the harbor of Aspinwall on the 10th badly injured the Railroad Company's stone wharf. No other damage was done except that a French brig lost her rudder.

The smallpox has abated greatly both in Panama and Aspinwall.

Major-Gen. George H. Thomas and His Rebel Detractors.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

As the TIMES has published, from a Richmond paper, one of the many billingsgate articles against our general officers, with respect to Gen. GEORGE H. THOMAS, whose brilliant services in the West have given him so strong a claim upon the nation's gratitude, it may not be amiss, as the past career of Gen. THOMAS is but little known to the public generally, to state the more prominent facts in relation to it.

Gen. THOMAS was graduated at the Military Academy in 1840, and commissioned in the Third artillery. In 1841 he was breveted a First Lieutenant, "for gallantry and good conduct in the war against the Florida Indians." In 1846 he was breveted Captain "for gallant conduct in the several conflicts at Monterey, Mexico, on the 21st, 22d, and 23d September, 1846;" and in 1847, "Brevet Major for gallant and meritorious conduct in the battle of Buena Vista, Mexico." After the Mexican War, he was Chief of the Department of Cavalry and Artillery instruction in the Military Academy, from April, 1851, to May, 1854. In 1855 he was made Major in the Second cavalry. This was one of the regiments created whilst JEFFERSON DAVIS was Secretary of War; its Colonel was ALBERT S. JOHNSTON; Lieut.-Colonel, ROBERT E. LEE; First Major, W. J. HARDEE; First Captain, EARL VAN DORN; Second Captain, EDMUND K. SMITH, the position of all of whom in the rebel service is too well known to the public.

Gen. THOMAS was on furlough when the rebellion broke out, and was assigned to duty in the column under Gen. PATTERSON, before the first battle of Bull Run, and from that time to the present he has not been absent from his command in the field an hour on leave.

Gen. THOMAS is a native of Southampton County, Va., in a Congressional District somewhat remarkable from the fact that but one of the seven graduates of the Military Academy from it left the service to join the rebels; while the wives of three of our most distinguished naval officers, Admiral FARRAGUT, Commodore BLAKE and the late Commodore PENDERGAST are from the same district. It is understood that Gen. THOMAS, in separating himself from his family, gave up the property he possessed to his sisters.

That with such a record as a soldier—known equally for his sterling acquirements as an officer, and his modesty as a man, having been selected by JEFFERSON DAVIS as Major in one of the regiments created through his influence and so well sprinkled with officers of Southern birth—the tale of the Richmond paper, that Gen. THOMAS should have gone to Richmond to ask a place in the State guard, a mere police company for guarding the State arsenal at Richmond, is too preposterous. The truth is DAVIS or LEGARE would have been but too glad to have secured a man of such eminence by conferring on him any command. The brilliant generalship of Gen. THOMAS at Mill Spring and Chickamauga, are festering sores in the Richmond Press. Hinc illæ lachrymæ. M.

PIQUE; A TALE OF THE ENGLISH ARISTOCRACY, is a novel that is immensely popular with the ladies; not in the least "sentimental;" often reminding you of the "Initials," though not in the least copied, and is destined to be as popular and have as great a run as that charming novel. The greatest compliment that can be paid it is that it has had a run in London of thirteen years—the greatest praise that can be bestowed on any novel.

DEAFNESS

NOISES IN THE HEAD,

Diseases of the Eye, Ear & Throat,

CATARRH CURED

BY

DR. VON EISENBERG,

AT HIS CONSULTING ROOMS,

DEAFNESS AND CATARRH.

No. 23 Forsyth-st., NEW-YORK, Oct. 1, 1863.

Dr. Von Eisenberg:

DEAR SIR: Without recapitulating the numerous benefits I have received through your wonderful cure of the deafness I have labored under many years, the blessings I enjoy will convince the most sceptical.

I have tried many aurists, in Europe and America, without success. I was still deaf as a post.

Three years ago I entered your office, underwent one operation, hoping, yet doubting, I should receive any relief, but was agreeably disappointed in finding the genius of your profession.

The innate skill you possess cured my deafness in one almost painless operation.

The joy I experienced was indescribable; 'twas a new life to me.

My hearing is perfect to this day.

I strongly advise all who are suffering under a difficulty of hearing or total deafness, to consult you imm ediatel as I also personally recommend all who apply to me. The numerous calls trespass on my time and patience, yet, remembering my own long, weary affliction, causes me to pity them.

This is not written to advertise your well-known, unrivaled reputation—that would be puerile; but as a measure of precaution to induce all to call on you at once without troubling me; yet I do not refuse to see any one who comes to me. This is the only way I can show my gratitude.

I also call the attention of those who are suffering from Catarrh, which disease I have labored under one year or more.

I experienced difficulty in breathing, langour, heaviness over the eyes, a sense of tightness on the brain, and copious expectorations of a hard and viscid nature. Accompanying this is a "polypus," quite filling the right nostril. On the 25th ult. you operated on both, killing the polypus, which is gradually passing away, and giving me great relief from the Catarrh. One more operation will effectually cure.

This testimonial brings with it my unalloyed and grateful thanks, with but a poor delineation of your wondrous skill as an Aurist.
